MRS. PANKHURST AFTER MILLION

MAY LOSE HER MILLION HERE

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, suffragette leader, whose plan not to share the expected $1,000,000 receipts with American suffragettes, has aroused a storm among the latter.

SUFFRAGE WOMEN ANGRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Word from London that Mrs. Pankhurst will not share the receipts of her lectures in this country with American organizations but will take back to England all the money she gets has angered scores of leading American suffragists.

Already the feeling in the matter has risen high, and in suffrage circles it is reported today that a big protest will come the moment the English militant leader lands here.

Mrs. Pankhurst, the dispatches say, hopes to raise $1,000,000 in the United States.

American suffragists declare they will accept nogleuce in her carrying away this huge sum, and further state their intention to demand of Mrs. Pankhurst an answer to this question:

"What do you intend to do with this million dollars? Is it to go to the English cau'e, or is it to be a private fund for yourself?"

The American suffrage leaders say not one of them has been consulted about Mrs. Pankhurst's lecture tour. These leaders say they are not certain but that the tour will prejudice their work in America. They point out the strong differences between the English militants and the American suffragists.

Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett of Boston, secretary of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, said:

For a woman who has had her eye on the main loin in her own work for so many years as Mrs. Pankhurst has, it is astonishingly oblivious of her to have so little imagination and information about our situation as not to consult the American suffragists before arranging her trip to find out whether or not it would prejudice our work to have her here.

Miss Alice Wichkam, Mrs. Pankhurst's representative in America, announced that the militant lecturer would speak under the auspices of the Women's Social and Political Union of England.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Carrie C. Catt, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw have been asked to sit on the platform at the Carnegie Hall meeting October 21.

Best Tariff Since War, Says Bryan

Secretary Says New Law Is "Epoch Making."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Characterizing the new tariff law as "epoch-making" and "a triumph for the President, the party and the country," Secretary of State Bryan today issued the following statement:

"The tariff law that went into effect last night is the best tariff measure since the war, and all who have taken part in the preparing and passing it are entitled to great credit.

"It is a better bill than we were able to pass twenty years ago, and I predict that political conditions are such as to make the present law possible.

"October 3 marks an epoch in the economic history of the generation and I am confident that it will not be long before the country will be celebrating a second triumph for the President, Congress, the Party and the Country, when the new currency bill passes and receives the President's signature."

Worst Storm of Year Sweeps Cape

Lightning Injures Wellfleet Wireless Operator and Station.

The worst storm of the year swept Cape Cod, driving shipping to shelter. The wireless station at South Wellfleet was struck by lightning and Operator Carey, who was on duty, was slightly injured. The wireless building were damaged and both the wireless receiving and the land wires were burned out.

The storm centred about Nantucket and considerable damage was done to property, although no loss of life was reported.

The coal barge Newburgh was at anchor off Stony Beach Cove, near Boston Light, waiting a tug, and would have been driven into the breakers if the tug Patience had not picked her up and towed her to safety.

The schooners Grace A. Martin and Singleton Palmer, anchored off Harding's Ledge, were forced to make for the open sea. The Portland and Bath boats were held up in President's Roads all night and returned to dock today instead of going to their destinations.

Boy Pulls Alarm for Chimney Flare

A six-year-old boy, seeing fire coming from the chimney of the blacksmith's forge near the Metropolitan Steamship Company in Atlantic avenue, pulled in an alarm from Box 792, located outside the offices. Five engines, a fireboat, three hook and ladder trucks, a chemical engine, three chiefs and the protective department responded. When they reached the box, the place was deserted and nobody knew of any fire. A clerk said that he had seen the boy running away from the box shortly before the apparatus arrived and had pointed to the flames coming from the chimney. The response to the alarm cost the city $100.

'Wolf' Lamar Given Up by Bondsmen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—David Lamar, the "Wolf," held on a charge of impersonating a Congressman, was surrounded by his bondsmen today before United States Commissioner Taylor. Lamar had been held in $3,000 bail for trial in New York on October 7. His lawyers immediately appealed to the District Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus.

Burleson to Probe Newspaper Figures

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Postmaster-General Burleson is preparing to investigate statements of circulation filed by the newspapers of the country under the law requiring such statements twice a year. Where it is established that the law has been deliberately evaded rigorous prosecutions will follow.

OVATION BY PARTY TO WALSH

Enthusiasm and harmony marked the opening of the Democratic State convention today in Faneuil Hall to ratify the State ticket and adopt the party platform. It had been predicted that one plank would be a veiled "slam" at Edmund Billings, the central figure in the port collectorship controversy. The plank did not materialize.

The platform proved the feature of the session. In this the Democratic party pledges itself to these things:

The absolute divorce of the New Haven Railroad from its trolley and steamship holdings.

The operation of the Boston & Maine Railroad independent of the New Haven Railroad.

Compulsory investigation of all labor disputes and compulsory publicity of the results.

Conferring on the Governor the power of veto over the orders of the Public Service Commission.

Indorsement of the Wilson administration.

The calling of a constitutional convention. (The last one was held in 1853.)

Taxation reform.

Consolidation of State boards and establishment of a single purchasing department with system of competitive bidding.

Abolition of party enrollment at the primaries and campaign literature printed by State.

Initiative, referendum, recall and woman suffrage.

Cheers for Candidates.

The hall was crowded with delegates and spectators. Cheers came every few minutes. The attendance was the largest since the new direct primary law went into effect.

When David I. Walsh, the Democratic candidate for Governor, appeared the applause lasted several minutes. He was cheered again and again. Similar ovations were shown as the other nominees filed into the platform.

Chairman Thomas B. Riley of the State Committee opened the convention at 11 o'clock. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer, Socialist candidate for Governor last year and a new convert to Democracy. Charles I. Stecker of Brookline was temporary chairman and Professor Edward H. Lewis permanent chairman.

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh made a rousing speech. Before reading the party's platform he said:

Our party in the national government has fulfilled its promises in six months, to a greater extent than even the most loyal and enthusiastic advocates deemed attainable. We now show in the State as our brave President is showing in the nation the sacred obligation of party pledges.

Independence Needed.

Chairman Stecker said:

The monopoly of transportation secured by the New Haven Railroad system, and its abuses, which have borne heavily upon Massachusetts and New England for the past few years with the defiance of law which has marked its growth, have caused problems which are yet unsettled. This solution must be undertaken by a Governor and a Legislature which shall be independent of any influence exerted by that great organization or any of its powerful associated interests.

Cole, 87, Oldest Hunter.

MIDDLEBORO, Oct. 4.—The oldest hunter to get a license this year is Job N. Cole, eighty-seven, a G. A. R. veteran.

PLEDGES WEAK, SAYS GARDNER

In attempt by the dyed in the wool supporters to weaken or omit entirely principles to which Congressman Gardner, Republican candidate for Governor, has pledged himself, led to a row today in the G. O. P. State convention in Tremont Temple.

The fight came immediately after Gus A. Hall, chairman of the resolutions committee, had read the party platform. As Hall sat down, Gardner rose up. The latter was in the back of the hall. With a show of anger he made his way to the front where he rebuked the committee, declared the platform as read was not strong enough and announced that he would abide by his own pledges and one lot.

Stands by Principles.

"The 40,000 or more people who voted for me," said Gardner, "voted on the supposition that I meant what I said to them. I want it understood right here that I stand for the same things today that I stood for when I stumped the State.

"The resolutions committee and I differ on very essential principles. On those essential principles, such as restricting immigration, compulsory arbitration and publicity in labor disputes, and the minimum wage for women, the platform is weak.

"I cannot afford to take one position before and another stand after my nomination. I stand today and tomorrow and the next day for those very same things which I stood for before my nomination."

Others in the hall joined in. Representative Washburn of Worcester announced that he would offer as a plank for the platform that his party stand for a "full and fair, impartial investigation of the railroad situation." He said he was sick and tired of standing on platforms which could be found lacking. "Others had been too many high sounding phrases and that he didn't want any man in the ball to go home feeling his head was "full of sugarcoread." He urged a stronger platform.

Guild Stirs Enthusiasm.

Chairman Curtis Guild of the convention aroused great enthusiasm by declaring that the old party is still alive and that the "Republican party is coming back."

He urged a fair show for the New Haven under the new management and said he believed the remedy for transportation, divorce and labor problems existed in federal legislation. He expressed his sympathy for Senator Lodge on the sick bed. The convention then sent the Senator a vote of sympathy and congratulation upon his recovery.

Use Petroleum as Eggs' Substitute

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Petroleum in biscuits is the latest dodge of those who practice food adulteration. Approximately 3 per cent. of the oil is used to make the biscuits light and fluffy. It being cheaper than butter, cream and eggs. The government will prosecute under the misbranding clause of the pure food act.

$100,000 Damage in St. Paul Fire

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 4.—The business district of this city was threatened early today when fire attacked the Union Station. This building, one of the landmarks of the city, was destroyed with the loss of $100,000, but the flames were kept from spreading.

BABY RUSSELL THAW COMES FOR A TOUR OF AMERICA

Russell Thaw, Evelyn's four-year-old son, who is on his way to America on the Lusitania to tour America with his mother, and who will respond to encores with her during her engagement in Boston, is thus described by Dorothy Dix:

"With a cloudy, sullen brow—a serious little face and dusky brown eyes. He is physically and temperamentally like Harry Thaw, and those who see the baby can well believe Evelyn's statement that the Matteawan fugitive is its father—spite of his denial."

Edison Says He's Only a Mechanic

Inventor "Couldn't Do Task of Revising the Latin Bible."

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Thomas A. Edison listened intently at his home at Llewellyn Park in Orange, N. J., as the Abbot Francis Gasquet, president of the English Benedictine Monks, unfolded to him the gigantic task in which the commission appointed by Pope Pius X., of which he is the head, is engaged, in revising the Latin Bible.

The inventor had asked the Abbott to dinner to hear of the work he has undertaken. When the Abbot had finished telling of the tremendous scope of the task involving as it does the minute analysis of ancient manuscripts wherever they may be found in Europe, Mr. Edison turned to him, saying:

"Father Gasquet, I want to tell you that I would not like your job. It's more than I could do."

"But you, Mr. Edison, are the genius of the age," protested Abbot Gasquet. "My work does not compare with yours."

"Oh," replied Mr. Edison, with a wave of the hand, "I am only a mechanic."

Find Unidentified Man Dead in Harbor

The body of an unidentified man was found by the harbor police near the L street bridge floating in the water and was taken to the North Grove street morgue. The man is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 135 pounds, has light hair, moustache and goatee. He was about fifty-five years old. He was well dressed in a dark coat and trousers, white shirt with black pencil stripe, turndown collar, black tie and cuff tie, white cotton underwear, blue stockings and black laced shoes.

CLAIM FELKER INSULT

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 4.—An attempt is afoot to disbar William Travers Jerome. It is backed by prominent New York lawyers, and is based upon Jerome's statement to Governor Felker that an indictment had been found against Harry Thaw, when no such indictment had been found.

The brief is signed by Nathaniel R. Martin, DeWitt C. Howe and Joseph A. Dudgeon, counsel for Thaw. Their contentions are these:

First: Thaw cannot legally be extradited unless he can be put on trial for conspiracy in New York upon his arrival there, with hope of conviction. If Thaw was insane at the time of the alleged conspiracy he cannot be convicted of it. And under the decisions in his case, Thaw WAS INSANE at the time of the alleged conspiracy.

THEREFORE, he cannot be extradited.

Second: Thaw cannot be extradited unless his extradition is asked in good faith, for the purpose of putting him on trial for conspiracy and for that purpose only. But the object of this requisition is to get Thaw back to Matteawan Governor Felker if he believes this to be true, must refuse extradition.

Wires from Governors.

With the brief are filed telegrams from thirty-three Governors, declaring that these Governors know of no case where extradition was asked or secured for a person who had been adjudged insane.

The brief, with citations omitted, reads in part as follows:

IN RE THAW.

Being the demand of the acting Governor of New York upon the Governor of New Hampshire for the extradition of Harry K. Thaw.

The Brief in behalf of Harry K. Thaw submitted to the Governor of New Hampshire, October 4, 1913.

This is a demand by the executive authority of the State of New York upon the executive authority of the State of New Hampshire that the latter cause one Harry K. Thaw, a citizen of Pennsylvania but found within the territorial jurisdiction of New Hampshire, to be arrested and delivered to an agent appointed by the State of New York "

"Bostone" Is Newest Pronunciation Style

Foss Calls It "Bawston," Walsh Sticks to Short "o."

Governor Foss pronounces Boston "Bawston." The Governor maintains this is the most popular pronunciation. It is heard everywhere in public speaking.

No woman public speaker has been heard to say "Boston" with the short "o" sound. Most of them say it is too affected, that "Bawston" has a natural tone. Mrs. Susan Y. Fitzgerald of the Publicity Union is a leading advocate of "Bawston."

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh says Boston with short "o" sound. Street Commissioner James Sullivan favors the same pronunciation. William A. Burnham, private secretary to William A. Gaston, goes one better, says "Bostown," with short "o," and a sound of "w" at the end.

During a recess, several students of Boston College entered into a discussion of the proper way to pronounce Boston, some said "BAWSTON." Others contended "Boston" was proper.

27 Missing in Tug and Liner Crash

RIO JANEIRO, Oct. 4.—Twenty-seven persons are missing today following the sinking of the military tug Guarany which was run down yesterday during maneuvers by the Lloyd Brazilian liner Pernambucano. There were fifty men on the tug, including several naval officers, aboard the tug at the time the accident occurred. Twenty-three were saved.

Oelrichs Freed on Stabbing Charge

Case Dropped When Girl Retracts Her Original Story.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Hermann Oelrichs, the youthful New York millionaire, who was arrested on the charge of stabbing Miss Lucille Singleton, a pretty young music student, today was discharged after Miss Singleton's confession, retracting her charge, had been read into the court records.

The girl's sworn statement declared that she had been cut by broken glass from a windshield after the automobile in which she and Oelrichs had been riding crashed into a tree. It also stated that both she and Oelrichs had been drinking and that she had erred in stating that Oelrichs had stabbed her.

U. S. Loses North Brookfield Case

Judge Morton in the United States District Court has sustained the demurrer of Postmaster Harold A. Foster of North Brookfield, Frank F. Whitehill, president of the Oxford linen mills of North Brookfield, and William S. Edwards and Harry H. Whatt, both of New York. All four were indicted, charged with conspiracy in violating the postal laws by inflating the stamp business of the North Brookfield postoffice in the interest of the postmaster. This demurrer being sustained causes the government to lose its case.

Woolen Mill Is Closed by Tariff

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The Globe Woolen Company of Utica, employing 900 persons, closed down today on account of theiew tariff. The owners say that the suspension is indefinite, and may be permanent.

Prince Too Poor to Furnish Home

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Proofs that the Prince and Phincess Alexander of Teck are painfully in need are manifest by the fact that they are unable to furnish more than three rooms in the steerage of Windsor, which Queen Mary placed at their disposal.

THAW COUNSEL FILE THEIR BRIEFS

receive and convey him to the State of New York, there to be dealt with according to law.

The demand is based upon the constitutional provision, which provides that:

A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another State, shall, on demand on the executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime, and the act of Congress, putting into operation this provision.

Only One Material.

"Numerous affidavits accompany the request of New York, but only one of them—that of Howard A. Conger, District Attorney of the County of Dutchess—is material to the questions to be considered. A careful reading of the other affidavits will show that they all relate more or less directly to the escape of said Thaw from Matteawan State Hospital, but none of them contains any charge of crime against Thaw.

"The affidavit of Conger just referred to charges that Thaw, with others, did wilfully, knowingly, corruptly and falsely commit the crime of conspiracy against the people of the State of New York, by conspiring among themselves to commit acts for the perversion and obstruction of justice and the due administration of the law and to commit a crime by conspiring and arranging and planning to effect and procure the escape of one Harry K. Thaw, a prisoner duly committed to and confined in the Matteawan State Hospital, a criminal insane hospital of the State of New York, and by conspiring, planning and carrying out the escape of said Harry K. Thaw, whereby on the seventeenth day of August, 1913, said Harry K. Thaw, with the aid and assistance of the above named parties and defendants, did escape from the Matteawan State Hospital for the criminal insane.

"There are two questions which must be determined adversely to the contentions of Thaw by the Governor of New Hampshire before the demand of New York can legally be complied with. These questions are, first, the question of law whether the moving papers of New York are regular on their face, and second, the question of fact whether Thaw is a fugitive from the justice of New York.

Affidavit Question.

"There must be an affidavit charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, and the facts and circumstances showing the commission of the crime charged and that the accused participated the same, must be shown by affidavits.

"The affidavit must be certain and absolute and is not sufficient if founded on belief or information.

"But after Mr. Conger makes the naked charge of conspiracy, by annexing the other affidavits, he says more plainly than the idea can be stated in words, that he personally knows nothing about the matter and makes his affidavit upon the information conveyed and the belief inspired by the other affidavits.

"If the affidavits, other than Conger's, are examined it will be seen that they do not charge Thaw with the crime of conspiracy, but merely that he escaped from Matteawan. Hence, it follows, not only that Conger's affidavit is made upon the information he got from the other affidavits, but, furthermore, that his naked assertion that Thaw committed conspiracy is without foundation in the affidavits from which his information was derived.

CONSTITUTION PROHIBITS GRANTING EXTRADITION

"We, therefore, respectfully submit, that on the face of the papers the Governor of New Hampshire not only cannot legally grant the extradition of Thaw, but, furthermore, by the Constitution is prohibited from doing so.

"Then comes the question of fact—Is Thaw a fugitive from the justice of New York

"A 'person charged' with a crime in any State 'who shall flee from justice and be found in another State' may be extradited.

"That the accused is a fugitive from justice is a fact of which the Governor who receives a requisition must satisfy himself by evidence.

"One who cannot be convicted of a crime cannot be 'charged' with such crime within the meaning of the Constitution or act of Congress. One who is immune from conviction for a crime, in the eye of the law, cannot be 'charged' with that crime. One who cannot be convicted of a crime and cannot be 'charged' with its commission cannot be 'a fugitive from justice.' As justice cannot reach him in the State where the act was committed, it cannot be said that by going into another State he has fled from justice.

Examined by the chairman.

Q. You are a citizen of the United States?

A. I am.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Deputy Attorney-General of the State of New York.

The chairman to Mr. McKeown, the attorney who appeared before the Board for Mr. Thaw:)

Is there any question you wish to ask Mr. Kennedy? (p. 126—Certified Report.)

By Mr. McKeown:

Q. I am sure you will be frank enough to say that your presence is due entirely to the desire to keep Mr. Thaw to Matteawan?

A. If I did it would be legally done.

Q. Mr. Jerome is associated with you in this way?

A. Yes, as a special deputy attorney-general.

Q. Do you know a man named Captain Lanyon?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any objection to telling what his connection with this matter is?

A. He, as I understand it, is here, he came with Mr. Jerome, simply for the purpose of assisting us in any way that he can properly and legally assist us.

Q. You have been made familiar with every move made by the New York State authorities here in Quebec looking towards the ultimate return of Thaw to Matteawan?

A. I cannot say all, practically all.

What Jerome Said.

"Mr. Jerome in his argument also said:

"The State of New York, sir, will not permit its justice to be defeated by the corrupt use of money if it can prevent it, and that is why the State of New York wants a man back whom it regards as a homicidal lunatic when influenced by his insane delusions and is a vicious character at other times, a man criminal in his lucid intervals, and dangerous in his insane ones.

"We find here by inference the opinion of Mr. Jerome that Thaw has 'lucid intervals' during which he is criminal in purpose and action. But, while the affidavits attached to the petition for extradition show clearly that Thaw is an insane person, they nowhere intimate that he ever has intervals when he is sane, or that the crime with which it is attempted to charge him was committed when he was sane.

"Mr. Jerome's assertion at most does not go to the extent of saying that Thaw was sane when the crime of conspiracy in question was committed but merely that he is 'criminal in his lucid intervals.'

"It undeniably appears from the affidavits that Thaw is insane, and that the real purpose of this proceeding is to secure to New York the possession of Thaw that he may be returned to the insane asylum from whence he escaped. If that is the purpose of New York, all will concede that the executive of New Hampshire cannot legally honor the demand.

"DUTY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE TO REFUSE REQUISITION"

As it appears by the papers, without contradiction, that Thaw on the date of the alleged conspiracy was an insane person, legally incapable of committing, being charged with, or proceeded against, for crime, the question of fact—Is Thaw a fugitive from the justice of New York?—should be answered in the negative.

On all the evidence it should be determined that the real purpose of New York is to secure the return of Thaw to Matteawan; that would seem to be the only conclusion reasonably attainable. And that being so, even were the papers in all respects regular, it is the legal duty of the executive of New Hampshire to refuse the requisition.—

conspiracy; (2) that he cannot be charged with having committed that crime; and (3) that he cannot have fled from the justice of New York.

"We, therefore respectfully submit that Thaw is not a fugitive from justice; that he could not have committed the crime of conspiracy or have been charged with having done so,—hence, as he could neither have been charged nor punished for conspiracy he could not have fled from the justice of New York because 'justice' means prosecution and punishment for crime.

INTENT TO PROSECUTE MUST BE MANIFEST

"It is independently necessary that the requisition for Thaw's extradition be made in good faith. As Hawley states the rule, it must appear 'that the requisition for his extradition is made in good faith, with the sole intent to prosecute him for said crime, and not to secure his return . . . to afford opportunity to serve him with civil process, nor for any other purpose.' In a word, it must appear to the Governor of New Hampshire that New York is moving in the matter with the single purpose and 'sole intent' to prosecute Thaw for the crime of conspiracy. The Governor of New Hampshire must be satisfied that the State of New York purposes to prosecute Thaw, an insane person, for the crime of conspiracy, and that such is the single purpose of the extradition proceeding.

"The following is an excerpt from the testimony of Franklin Kennedy, Deputy Attorney-General of the State of New York, before the Board of Enquiry of the Canadian Immigration Department at a hearing relative to the deportation of Thaw at Coaticook, Quebec, September 4, 1913:

Examined by the chairman.

Q. You are a citizen of the United States?

A. I am.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Deputy Attorney-General of the State of New York.

The chairman to Mr. McKeown, the attorney who appeared before the Board for Mr. Thaw:)

Is there any question you wish to ask Mr. Kennedy? (p. 126—Certified Report.)

By Mr. McKeown:

Q. I am sure you will be frank enough to say that your presence is due entirely to the desire to keep Mr. Thaw to Matteawan?

A. If I did it would be legally done.

Q. Mr. Jerome is associated with you in this way?

A. Yes, as a special deputy attorney-general.

Q. Do you know a man named Captain Lanyon?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any objection to telling what his connection with this matter is?

A. He, as I understand it, is here, he came with Mr. Jerome, simply for the purpose of assisting us in any way that he can properly and legally assist us.

Q. You have been made familiar with every move made by the New York State authorities here in Quebec looking towards the ultimate return of Thaw to Matteawan?

A. I cannot say all, practically all.

What Jerome Said.

"Mr. Jerome in his argument also said:

"The State of New York, sir, will not permit its justice to be defeated by the corrupt use of money if it can prevent it, and that is why the State of New York wants a man back whom it regards as a homicidal lunatic when influenced by his insane delusions and is a vicious character at other times, a man criminal in his lucid intervals, and dangerous in his insane ones.

"We find here by inference the opinion of Mr. Jerome that Thaw has 'lucid intervals' during which he is criminal in purpose and action. But, while the affidavits attached to the petition for extradition show clearly that Thaw is an insane person, they nowhere intimate that he ever has intervals when he is sane, or that the crime with which it is attempted to charge him was committed when he was sane.

"Mr. Jerome's assertion at most does not go to the extent of saying that Thaw was sane when the crime of conspiracy in question was committed but merely that he is 'criminal in his lucid intervals.'

"It undeniably appears from the affidavits that Thaw is insane, and that the real purpose of this proceeding is to secure to New York the possession of Thaw that he may be returned to the insane asylum from whence he escaped. If that is the purpose of New York, all will concede that the executive of New Hampshire cannot legally honor the demand.

REAL PURPOSE TO GET THAW BACK TO ASYLUM

"We respectfully submit that it must be found by the Governor of New Hampshire that the State of New York is not moving in this matter with the 'sole intent' to prosecute Thaw for the crime of conspiracy, but is actuated by the fundamental purpose to return Thaw to Matteawan State Hospital for the criminal insane.

CONCLUSIONS.

"1. As the papers set out no indictment and as there is to be found no affidavit charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, the question of law—Is Thaw, upon the face of the papers, substantially charged with a crime against the laws of New York?—should be answered in the negative.

"2. As it appears by the papers, without contradiction, that Thaw on the date of the alleged conspiracy was an insane person, legally incapable of committing, being charged with, or proceeded against, for crime, the question of fact—Is Thaw a fugitive from the justice of New York?—should be answered in the negative.

"3. On all the evidence it should be determined that the real purpose of New York is to secure the return of Thaw to Matteawan; that would seem to be the only conclusion reasonably attainable. And, that being so, even were the papers in all respects regular, it is the legal duty of the executive of New Hampshire to refuse the requisition.

THAW BABY IS NOW ON HIS WAY TO JOIN EVELYN IN AMERICA

Evelyn's Love Story

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"No man is a hero to his valet."—Madame de Scrigne.

Evelyn had intended to remain in her apartments on the Hotel Lorraine on the Sunday following the murder. She was exhausted mentally and physically. She needed a complete rest. Also she shunned the attention she drew on the street. Her face was so well known now, through being published in every picture paper in the city, that every other person knew her by sight.

But Evelyn was called out that night by a message from the Presbyterian Hospital that William Bedford, for seven years her husband's valet, was dying, following an operation for appendicitis.

Evelyn hastened to the hospital. Cynical persons might say—as they did the next day—that Evelyn went to the hospital to learn if the dying man had told her or would tell anything to the district attorney's representative which would harm Harry. Evelyn knew, of course, that Harry's valet would be called on as a witness. Her own maid had already been quizzed.

It will be remembered that, when Evelyn and Harry were married in the Third Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, on April 4, 1905, by Reverend W. L. McEwan, a marriage notice was sent to the press by Evelyn's step-father, C. J. Holman.

This notice began thus:

"Re-married in Pittsburgh."

It was intended to convey the idea that there had been a previous marriage ceremony and that the Pittsburgh ceremony was only in deference to the wishes of Harry's mother. Society accepted this "Re-married" phrase with various comments.

Bedford, the dying valet, swore in his affidavit to Assistant District Attorney Carvan:

"They (Harry and Evelyn) were not married in Europe. To my knowledge they were married only in Pittsburgh and not while they were abroad."

Then Bedford gave answers to other questions, as follows:

Q.—Did not they register in London as man and wife? A.—They did not.

Q.—Or while they were in Paris at the hotels there, didn't they register as man and wife? A.—They did not.

Q.—Don't you know they were living as man and wife? A.—Yes. They occupied separate rooms. Sometimes these rooms were connected. They communicated with each other while in London and Paris.

Bedford was questioned by Mr. Garvan regarding the general attitude of Harry and Evelyn toward each other. Among the things he said were:

The marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Thaw were always of the most pleasant nature. They got along well together. They were happy and contented with each other. I never knew them to quarrel or to be angry. They were absolutely no flaws in their domestic affairs. Thaw's habits were good. Once in a while he became excited when things did not go right.

Mr. Thaw never gave any evidences of being insane. He never was in a similar condition or manner at any kind in the seven years I served him as valet.

He further was treated by a physician as to his mental condition so far as my knowledge goes. On the evening of the tragedy he was the same as usual. I helped him dress and there was nothing to suggest a mental disturbance.

Mr. Thaw usually took a dinner pill to aid digestion, but I have no knowledge of his having taken drugs or narcotics. There never was any occasion for it.

Mrs. Thaw, I am positive, has never received any notes from White since her marriage. I have no idea that any home ever had anything to do with White. There was no go-between. Those in Thaw's employ were loyal to him.

The information in this affidavit was seized upon by the public with avidity. The whole question of Evelyn's marriage was brought up again, particularly in Pittsburgh. At the time of the ceremony the Pittsburgh newspapers naturally let the "re-marriage" statement be taken for what it was worth. It was none of their business then.

And with the dying valet saying that the Pittsburgh ceremony was the only one he ever knew of, the Pittsburgh reporters dug around among the marriage archives until they unearthed the original records.

The day after Bedford's affidavit was made public dispatches from Pittsburgh said that, ever since the Thaw wedding, there had been much secrecy about the license and that every effort was being made to prevent the records from being reached.

But the docket was finally unearthed and the following facts about the Thaw-Nesbit marriage were obtained:

"Harry Kendall Thaw, born Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 12, 1871; residence Pittsburgh; occupation, proprietor; married before? No."

It seems that, when the license was taken out neither Harry nor Evelyn went to Pittsburgh City Hall. Instead, one of the registry clerks was brought out to Lyndhurst, the Thaw home, in one of the Thaw carriages. The clerk issued the license at the house and the record was suppressed at the hall.

Such a proceeding was not customary but the clerk obtained a fat fee for his trouble and no reporter saw the records at that time.

In the face of Bedford's affidavit and the Pittsburgh record Evelyn made a further denial in her divorce suit. The evidence which Harry's lawyers had imposed on her to defend her reputation in these words:

I was married to Mr. Thaw abroad before the ceremony in this country and I have the proof, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. I shall produce the proof at the trial.

But seven months later, when on the witness stand before her husband's murder jury, Evelyn was asked: "When were you married?" Her answer was: "April 4, 1905."

The next question was: "Where?" The girl replied: "Pittsburgh."

She made no attempt to mention any previous marriage abroad.

CUSTOMS RUSH DUE TO TARIFF

Boston merchants today handed over thousands of dollars to Uncle Sam when the Custom House opened, all as a result of the signing of the new tariff law by President Wilson.

These merchants were in a great hurry to take out more than $20,000,000 worth of goods which have been held in Boston bonded warehouses until the act was signed. They will now come in under the new tariff duties.

Collector Curtis and his men today collected duties under the old act, but has been official notice in received of the new law will give rebates. In the meantime the goods will be taken out of the warehouses at once.

Today was the busiest in the history of the custom house. The warehouse division and the cashier's department felt the brunt of the onslaught of the importers, but all departments were rushed to the limit. The warehouse trebled its force of clerks, drawing from every other department that could spare men. The storekeepers also had to have extra help.

Collector Curtis expects to receive an official copy of the new tariff schedules from Washington today. Monday a renewed rush is expected.

$25,000,000 IN GOODS, HELD UNDER BOND, ARE RELEASED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—More than $25,000,000 worth of imports which have been held under bond in federal warehouses were released today under the clauses of the Underwood tariff. By Tuesday $75,000,000 worth of imports will have been dumped on the country's markets.

The customs house opened for business an hour earlier than usual in fore knowledge of the fact that there would be a rush of brokers and importers to unload their holdings under the Underwood tariff schedules. Those imports were actually brought in while the Payne-Aldrich tariff was in effect but bond was forfeited and the goods were stored in government warehouses.

Duty was to be paid when the imports were "released." Surveyor of the Port Henry said that imports have been piling up in the bonded warehouses for six weeks in anticipation of the passage of the new tariff with its low rates.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Queen Mary of England is personally superintending preparations for the wedding on October 15 of Princess Alexandra, Duchess of Fife, and Prince Arthur, son of the Duke of Connaught.

The wedding will take place in the Chapel Royal at St. James' Church. Queen Mary is consulting with the Princess Royal, mother of the Duchess, and with the Duchess herself, planning the ceremony, which will be a stately royal wedding—fit for a Queen."

The church is already being decorated. Covers for 600 guests will be laid in the banqueting hall. Special guards will watch for feared suffragette demonstrations.

RESCUE MINER ENTOMBED IN EARTH 7 DAYS

CENTRALIA, Pa., Oct. 4.—Thomas Toshesky, the miner entombed over a week ago 800 feet underground, was liberated early today. He had been entombed for more than 155 hours, and was in good physical condition when he was released by the efforts of the forty men who worked in relays night and day to save him. He had lost no weight, and declared "I never felt better in my life."

As the rescuing miners drilled away the last layer of coal and rock that separated Toshesky from liberty, the imprisoned man, looking more like a bear than like a human, exclaimed:

"Where is my wife? Is she here? I must see her at once."

The rescuing party attempted to lift Toshesky to the surface, but he, good naturedly told them he did not need their assistance and climbed along the jutty coal vein to the surface.

"It's pretty good to be out again," he said. "I tell you it was mighty lonesome down there. I was in a space so little that at times I thought I would surely choke to death, even though you boys did pump lots of air down to me."

Toshesky was surrounded by a crowd of curious who began to ask him questions concerning his imprisonment. The mine doctors, however, refused to permit him to give any detailed answers at the time, hustling him into an automobile.

"Where are you going to take me?" he asked.

"To a hospital," was the answer.

"No, you aren't," replied Toshesky. "I want to go home to my wife. I want to see her. And I want her to give me some beefsteak to eat."

The doctors, after a preliminary examination of Toshesky at the mouth of the mine had disclosed nothing radically wrong with him, agreed to take him to his home where, after he had greeted his wife, he was again examined.

The doctors later declared the man seemed to have suffered no bad effects despite his long confinement in the earth.

Commerce Judges to Retain Office

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Though the Commerce Court is abolished the federal judges assigned thereto will continue in office under the terms of the deficiency appropriation bill as passed by the Senate today. The bill carries appropriations exceeding $5,000,000, an increase of $1,800,000 over the House measure.

Widow Suicide in Fire-Escape Leap

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—"What would you do, if you had my troubles?" asked Mrs. Winifred Mullenhauer, a widow with two children, as she sat with her cousin. She climbed to the fire escape and leaped sixty feet to instant death.

Fine Man as Result of Orchard Row

Robert J. Ferris of No. 36 Hamlet street, Somerville, and widely known as a horse trader, was fined $50 in the Somerville Police Court by Judge Went-worth for assault on Patrolman Samuel Burns, his neighbor. The defendant appealed. The trouble grew out of a row over an orchard between their homes.

M'FARLAND'S BRIDE NEARLY COST HIS LIFE

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Allison McFarland, acquitted of the slaying of his wife, his wed Florence Bromley, the "Bunny Love" whose more than one hundred sentimental letters nearly sent McFarland to the electric chair. The marriage is surrounded by mystery which only serves to deepen the romance.

The authorities here supposed McFarland was serving a sentence of eighteen months as a counterfeiter in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., where he was sent only seven months ago, but records just returned by a justice of the peace show they were married here several days ago.

Endearing letters sent to McFarland by the Bromley girl came near sending him to the electric chair. These letters, more than one hundred in number, were found among his possessions after his wife died of poison and furnished detectives with what they charged was a motive for McFarland's wanting to do away with his wife. Mrs. McFarland was a frequent sufferer from insomnia and took opiates.

McFarland went to trial in Newark, N. J., was convicted and sentenced to die.

A higher court ordered a new trial. At the second trial Miss Bromley testified in his defence, admitted authorship of the letters and sustained his contention that he merely wanted to divorce his wife, not to kill her.

When McFarland was acquitted he went direct to the City Hall in Newark in quest of a marriage license to wed Miss Bromley. The clerk denied it for him. Then McFarland came to New York and soon after was arrested as a counterfeiter. He pleaded guilty and Miss Bromley denounced him, saying that she was through with him forever.

Gladys Roosevelt's Sister a Heroine

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Miss Gladys Roosevelt, a cousin of former President Roosevelt, is alive today owing to the heroism of her sister, Jean, who saved her when she was thrown from a spirited horse near Meadowcroft, the Roosevelt country place at Sayville, L. I.

As it was, she was severely injured. Her escape from death was the narrowest in the several mishaps with automobiles and horses in which she has figured since her debut in 1907.

Miss Roosevelt was riding ahead of her sister when she was thrown. Her mount reared around her, and was in great danger of stepping upon her unconscious form when Miss Jean dragged her sister to safety.

Marie Lloyd Yields to the Inevitable

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Marie Lloyd, the English music hall star, today decided to submit to the terms of the United States government relative to her entry into this country, and therefore soon will attempt to entertain the American public with some songs and dances imported from the British Isles.

Miss Lloyd and Bernard Dillon, a jockey, arrived here a few days ago on the Olympic registered as man and wife. To government officials they later admitted they were not married to each other. The government decided that they could have entry only after posting $1,500 bond each.

CARGILL SAID HE'D KILL SELF, WIFE ASSERTS

SPENCER, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Joseph C. Cargill, whose husband's body the State police are investigating, told for the first time her story of the shooting.

"I was in my sewing room," she said, "when my husband called at my home and demanded $100. He said that if I did not give it to him, he would hurt my feelings. I asked him how he could do that and he replied that he would kill himself. I told him I could not help it, as I had no money. He left, saying that I did not see him again."

Here is Mrs. Cargill's story of the shooting.

"On July 24 my husband called at my home and demanded $100. He said that if I did not give it to him, he would hurt my feelings. I asked him how he could do that and he replied that he would kill himself. I told him I could not help it, as he liked.

"On the evening of September 18 he called again.

Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Sanitarium Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished in From One to Five Days at Home.

The Keeley Sanitarium, located at 403 Main street, Dwight, Ill., has published a booklet telling how the tobacco habit can be banished in one day. Any man who has used tobacco for years and has repeatedly succeeded only in substituting one habit for another, will be interested in this booklet. This method can be taken at home without loss of time from business. It is said to be entirely harmless, containing neither opium, cocaine, hypodermic injections nor any other habit forming drugs. Those who are interested in learning more should send their name and address at once.

FOREWORD

It is OUR Anniversary Sale—but we cannot celebrate it by ourselves. Therefore, we make it worth while for all who have needs to supply to help us.

48TH ANNIVERSARY SALE

A week is a short time for our Anniversary Sale—but long enough for those who wish to practice thrift.

BEGINS MONDAY, OCT. 6TH

Not the mistakes—but the SUCCESSES of importers and manufacturers form the economic attractions of our Anniversary Sale.

During our Anniversary Sale—as at all other times—TRUTH in our advertising is a quality—not a virtue.

Preparations of immense calibre have been quietly going on for weeks. This applies to the rounding out of physical facilities.

The MERCHANDISE interests began to receive our high-voltage efforts as early as last December.

NEXT MONDAY THE CULMINATION.

Every obstructive contingency that we can foresee will be checkmated in advance.

THE BUYING should proceed smoothly, without confusion or discomfort.

The values are as good as our words say they are.

Every item is the fulfilment of organized endeavor.

EVERY dealer who has a "sale" emphasizes quality—claims that the merchandise involved is of the highest grade.

The claim is sometimes true—much oftener it is absolutely false.

There are many large incorporated wholesale distributors of mean merchandise who sell millions of dollars' worth of trash to retailers for "sales." The goods are manufactured for that special motive—and for no other.

THERE ISN'T A YARD OF CLOTH, a paper of pins, a single suit, a rug, an umbrella—or anything else that we ask you to buy during our Anniversary Sale that we do not thoroughly guarantee.

You know what the SHEPARD STORES stand for—medium to best qualities. In spite of the miraculously low prices, we haven't compromised our standard an iota.

We are on the verge of achieving our largest success. It will be YOUR success as much as ours.

AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION ABA ORGANIZED 1875

You can help Boston by extending little courtesies to the wearers of the A. B. A. badge.

Thousands of delegates from all sections of the country will be in Boston during next week in attendance on the convention of the American Bankers Association.

Everything that the local members can do for the comfort of the visitors will be done. There is a complete program of entertainment. It includes the furnishing of automobiles for trips about the city and the suburbs, a reception and ball in Symphony Hall, historical meetings in the three oldest churches and in Faneuil Hall, a formal concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and a harbor trip and inspection of the port.

No convention committee ever planned more carefully for demonstrating the attractions of a great city.

But strangers are likely to obtain the most favorable impression of a city from the little courtesies of citizens whom the visitors meet upon the street, in the shops or in public buildings.

We believe, therefore, that every citizen of Boston will co-operate with us in sustaining the high reputation for hospitality and courtesy which Boston so thoroughly deserves.

And we cordially invite every citizen to join us in a great meeting of welcome on the beautiful esplanade of the Charles River Basin Monday evening, October 6, when, in honor of our guests, there will be concerts by four bands, a beautiful display of fireworks and an illumination of this largest mid-city water park in the world.

STATE FINDS NEW WITNESSES IN EATON CASE

Three new witnesses, said to have a very important bearing on the Eaton case, are reported to have been found by the prosecution, and are expected to testify at the continuation of the inquest into the death of Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton and the trial of Jennie May Eaton, his widow, on a charge of murder.

With the trial less than two weeks away, opening on October 14, the government and the District Attorney have thrown a veil of mystery over the proceedings and not the slightest talking of the line which they intend to present in court has been allowed to become public. They still maintain that their case is remarkably strong, and that they have a great deal of evidence which will act as a bombshell in the camp of the defence.

Reports that the source of the poison through which Admiral Eaton met his end had been found are denied by officials. It is said that the grocery store clerk, Earle Forsemann and Adelbert Loppis, of Assinippi, have denied that they sold any Rough on Rats, which contains arsenic, to any member of the Eaton family.

Both men recall, it is said, the sale of "Dead Stuck," a powder for the extermination of cockroaches, to members of the family, in analysis, it is proven that this preparation contains no arsenic, which Professor William F. Whitney, of the Harvard expert, declared that death was due.

The names of the three new witnesses have been kept a secret by the government. One is, however, a woman. One of the men is a close friend of Mrs. Eaton's daughters, and the woman is a friend of June Keyes. The third witness is a man who did some work for the Eatons at one time.

It is announced definitely that Mrs. Eaton will not claim insanity as a defence.

The supposed theory of the government that Mrs. Eaton was jealous of her husband, was given attention, it is said, in the questioning of the twin sisters, Mrs. Leon Booth and Mrs. Avery Powers of Hackland. They were asked, it is believed, whether the Admiral had not tried to flirt with them, and both are said to have testified that far from being presuming, Admiral Eaton had always shown a marked reticence, even to friendliness. Information, he was in the bakery conducted by their father.

Smoked Cigarettes for 22 Years

Habit Was Ruining Him, But He Conquered It in Three Days, Easily.

The portrait below is that of Mr. P. J. Silliagary, a well-known citizen of Livingston, Montana, who knew his life was being ruined through the pernicious habit of cigarette smoking, yet could not find anything to stop it and solace the nervous craving until he got the remarkable book that can now be obtained free.

A clergyman, Rev. M. Rose, Dayton, Ohio, testifies that after having been a slave to tobacco 44 years he got rid of the habit entirely in a few days, greatly improving his health.

QUIT TOBACCO, GAINED 35 LBS.

Everybody in Manrum, Okla., is talking about the big change in Al Reeves as he put on 35 lbs. in healthy flesh since getting rid of tobacco habit through the information gained in the free book which you may also easily obtain.

That he could never quit was the fear of George Ambush, Pearl street, Philadelphia, who was a slave of tobacco for many years, but after getting the book he learned how the habit could be conquered in three days. Now he writes that he is forever free from the craving and is in much improved health.

BOOK GIVEN FREE.

A valuable, interesting book on how to overcome the tobacco habit (in any form) has been written by Edw. J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 208 P., New York, N. Y., and he will send it free to any one who writes asking for it, as he is very anxious that all who are victims of the craving for tobacco, snuff, cigars or cigarettes may save themselves easily, quickly, gently and lastingly. Nerves, heart, kidneys and stomach improved, nervous tranquillized, manly vigor imparted and other benefits often reported.

McEttrick to Run as an Independent

Uncle Joe Cannon is reported to be thinking of "doing a Jeffries." He's going to try to "come back." But "they never——"

* * *

Raoul H. Boudreau, an old baseball player, has the Republican and Progressive nominations against James M. Hurley in the Ninth Middlesex District. Hurley was the Democratic Representative last year. If Boudreau gets the baseball vote, he should win, and wouldn't this be a good suggestion for some of those stars that the National Commission won't let "write" about the world's series.

* * *

Michael J. McEttrick, one of the most powerful and able Democrats in last year's House who was defeated at the primaries, has decided to run as an Independent. He deserves to win.

* * *

That vast silence you notice is Roosevelt sailing for South America.

* * *

John Farley is the Progressive candidate for the Senate against New Haven-Collar McCoigin of Ward 8. Farley isn't banking on winning, but every decent man who wants to see a Legislature free of New Haven domination hopes he will beat McCoigin.

* * *

Candidate Gardner's determined opposition to woman's suffrage has knocked that plank out of the Republican platform. It is predicted. The Republicans are going to make their fight on restriction of immigration, the price of cheese in Switzerland, the drouth in Egypt and other thrilling Massachusetts issues.

* * *

Congressman Gardner can't have Faneuil Hall today for that "wallop" at Mr. Bird. The Democrats are conventioning in the Cradle, while the Republican civil war is fought out in Tremont Temple.

* * *

There are three spots from which an explosion may be expected at the Republican convention today.

1—Mr. Gardner's chair when some one demands a declaration for women's suffrage.

2—Mr. Hatfield's corner when the Essex County Gardnerites demand his blood.

3—And the high stool where Willie Boy Benton will be sulking.

* * *

There is a hot fight for the Senatorial seat of Harry N. Stearns of Cambridge, vacated, after his activities against pure food laws at the last session. Representative John P. Brennan, one of the Democratic leaders of the House last year, is expected to win over ex-Representative Bean, and George B. Henderson, Progressive.

* * *

Dr. Joseph F. Hart of Lincoln was the only enrolled Progressive in Lincoln when the fight for the Progressive nomination opened in the Thirteenth Middlesex District. He won in the caucus, however, over George H. Clarke of Sudbury, and Albert Lang of Concord, and has an even chance of being elected.

* * *

As a matter of fact, if a Foss candidacy affected Gardner's chances at all, it would improve them, for the simple reason that they couldn't be worse than they are.

* * *

Mr. Gardner would be a headliner on the vaudeville circuits, but in the State House—why, that's something else again.

* * *

Imagine Mr. Gardner writing a veto message for three hours.

"You burbling bunch of flim-flammers, if you don't quit your lucubrations, I'll come down there and take the sergeant-at-arms' mace and bit you a wallop. Throw this bill in the stink."

* * *

Mr. Gardner to Messrs. Hale, etc.: "Hoop ff, don't bother me."

* * *

Mr. Voter to Mr. Gardner: "Ditto, ditto; dito, ditto, ditto."

* * *

So Governor Foss gets his political wisdom from an owl. Let's get us a set of owls.

Hold Charlestown Boys for Breaks

Probable cause on two counts of breaking and entering was found against Frederick Stewart in nineteen years old, by Judge Bragg in the Charlestown District Municipal Court. It was charged that Stewart broke into a drug store and stole articles to the value of $70, and that he committed various acts of vandalism in the First Universalist Church. He was held in $1,000.

Albert Doherty, sixteen years old, who was with Stewart, was sentenced to the Concord Reformatory. Appeal was taped, but was fined $50 for carrying a loaded revolver and sent to Charles Street Jail in default of the fine.

Evelyn Thayer Weds J. T. Burr

LANCASTER, Oct. 4.—The wedding of Miss Evelyn Thayer and J. Tucker Burr, Jr., at the Unitarian Church this noon, was the most brilliant that has been witnessed in the town.

Miss Thayer is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. John E. Thayer and niece of the late Nathaniel, Augustus V., H. and Buyard Thayer. She is a sister of Mrs. Francis Abbot Goodhue and Miss Natalie Thayer. Miss Thayer is a prominent member of the Vincent Club.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Tucker Burr, 90 Marlboro street, Boston, Harvard '06 and a member of the Tavern Club.

NEW YORK SIGNED TESREAU ON ACCOUNT OF HIS SIZE; M'CONAUGHY'S COMMENT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

PILGRIMS AND BROOKLYN DOUBLE-HEADER FOR TODAY CALLED OFF BY RAIN

Tesreau Signed on Account of His Size

Has Developed Into One of Best Pitchers in Old League

By J. W. M'CONAUGHY.

The other day we discussed a pitcher of the Giants who "had nothing on the ball." This is a story about a pitcher who had nothing on the ball. The difference is in the quotation marks. The story is about Big Jeff Tesreau, the only pitcher in the big leagues who was signed on his size.

To begin from the beginning, Big Jeff is not his name. He was christened Charles, but he was not consulted at the time. This occurred in the village of Cape Girardeau, one of the little towns that failed to sink into the Mississippi at the time of the big earthquake. The steamboats used to stop there before the railroads put the steamboats out of business, so Cape Girardeau is now on the map only as the birthplace of Charles Tesreau.

DISQUALIFIED ON ACCOUNT OF SIZE.

At an early age Charles Tesreau grew much too large for Cape Girardeau. There was danger of his blocking river traffic. His father took him to Fredericktown, which is also in the sovereign State of Missouri at the edge of the Ozark country. Thus the young Tesreau became the northern boundary of the mountains.

At seventeen he tried to make the local ball team, but he was disqualified on account of his size. He is a yard or so over six feet now, and weighs 220 pounds in condition. He says he shaped up somewhat after that fashion at seventeen.

Remembering the scriptural observation about a prophet invariably getting the kibosh from his own gang, young Charles Tesreau offered his services to the Ironton club. The manager of this bush league outfit having no prejudices against bulk for it's own sake permitted the coming hero of the Giants to strike out from fourteen to twenty men with great regularity.

Began Career in Ironton.

It was here in Ironton that he began to qualify for that rather suggestive cognomen of "Bullfrog" Tesreau, a name which stems from that fact that, in spite of his mighty bigness, he developed great agility in leaping lightly from league to league.

At this time he had nothing but his splendid strength which enabled him to throw a baseball so hard that minor league batters could not swing at the same in time to hit it. At Ironton he signed a contract with the Austin club in the Texas League and apparently forgot all about it. So did the Austin club. The latter did not remember that he belonged to them until it was announced that he had been assigned for a trial with the St. Louis Browns. Then there was a kick and Big Jeff was ordered South.

Three Days with Detroit.

He remained in the South until the league that he was connected with—or that club—blew up. Considering himself footloose and desirous of viewing the great cities of his fatherland, Big Jeff signed with Detroit, and reported there. Three days after he had landed, Hughey Jennings was ordered to return him to the South. Undismayed by these repeated interruptions in his well-planned tours of the United States, Big Jeff settled down to pitch baseball at a place called Shreveport. It was here that McGraw first laid eyes on him; and having laid eyes on him he kept them so laid ever after.

Big Jeff pitched against the Giants, but not any astonishing success. It was not his skill as a pitcher which attracted McGraw's attention. There wasn't any such thing in connection with Big Jeff. It was his tremendous size, his good nature and his grit—those things, and especially the first and last, that commended him to McGraw. The little leader of the Giants believes in bulk on the firing line. It is simple arithmetic with him. The bigger and stronger a pitcher is the longer he can stand the strain of big league pitching—that's the way McGraw figures it.

Coaching Made Tesreau.

Wilbert Robinson looked him over at the same time and he and McGraw agreed that with all that strength and nerves it was simply a question of a little coaching to make a real pitcher of Tesreau. Then in due time he was translated to the Toronto Club of the Eastern League with a McGraw string on him.

At Toronto he began to learn his craft. He experimented with the spit ball and took to it as the duck takes to water. He had been using this delivery only a year when Johnny Evers said he considered him a nearer to the real spitball pitcher as Ed Walsh.

He also worked to develop a "hook," —a curved ball, to mix up with his fast and the "spitball." He now has all three of them along with his grit and strength.

The answer to all of which is that Big Jeff Tesreau is now one of the best right-handers in the country and barring accidents he is likely to demonstrate the same to a noticeable extent next week.

In his resting hours back in the Ozarks he is popularly supposed to be a strangle bears, by way of keeping his grip in form. Other sportsmen declare that he had never seen a bear until Larry Doyle took him up the Bronx Zoo. Feeroo of himself takes no part in the controversy. His job is pitching baseballs and he devotes himself to it.

CHARLES M. TESREAU

Big Jeff Tesreau's Diamod Career and Big League Record

Charles M. Tesreau—Born Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 5, 1889. Height—6 ft 2½. Weight —228. Pitches and bats right-handed. Tesreau made his professional debut in 1909, during which season he played with Waco, Houston and Galveston. He was then taken on by the St. Louis Browns, but never given a trial, and sent to Shreveport. He played with Shreveport until purchased by the New York Nationals in the Fall of 1910. He was sent to Toronto by Manager McGraw and played with that team in 1911 until recalled by the Giants in the Fall. With Toronto Tesreau played in 38 games. He hit for .300, fielded .875, and pitched fourteen winning games and nine losing ones, a winning percentage of .609. His record since is:

RECORD PRICE FOR A MINOR LEAGUE CLUB

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 4.—The Indianapolis American baseball baseball club has been sold by Sol Meyer, owner, to James C. McGill, George A. Wahlgreen and Jack Hendricks, of Denver. The purchase price of $165,000 is said to be the largest ever paid for a minor league organization.

The disposal of the franchise by Meyer comes after a year of futile effort to build up a winning aggregation.

He became owner during the Summer of 1912, and that season and the one just ended the team finished in last place in the association race.

Since 1908, when the local team won the Association pennant, baseball from an Indianapolis standpoint has been disappointing and attendance has been poor.

This city is said to be one of the best baseball towns in the circuit, and with a team playing fairly well the returns to the promoters have been large.

Mack Has Confidence in His Pitchers

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—Following his first open declaration, in which he predicted victory for the Athletics in the world's series, Connie Mack later went into details in defence of his stand. Answering the claim that the Giants' pitching staff is superior, he said:

"Bender and Plank are first-class veterans, but Bender pitches only when the game is important, and I think we must win. He wins. Bender is only thirty years old. Plank is older in years than Mathewson, but he hasn't pitched as many seasons. We took the measure of Mathewson and Marquard in Boston.

It is said that we cannot hit Demaree and Fescus, but that is all a matter of speculation. We could reply by saying that the Giants will not be able to hit Shawkey, Bush, Hoods and Brown. Shawkey and Bush are very likely to work in the series.

"The boys think but little more of the coming series than one in the league race. I never saw cooler men."

Two Umpires for Pirates-Naps Series

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4.—President Barney Dreyfus, of the Pittsburgh National League Club has been notified that Umpires Eason and Emslie will officiate for the National League at the Pittsburgh-Cleveland post-season series games.

President Thomas Lynch assigned only one umpire for the games and Dreyfus replied to President Garry Herrmann, of the National Commission. He submitted the question to the various club owners and replies had been received from four, each favoring the appointment of two umpires.

PLANS FORMED FOR ATHLETES' ANTIPODES TRIP

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

Despite the adverse criticism that is being handed to the management and the arrangements in general for the tour of a team of American athletes to Australia this Fall, the plans will mature.

The party, which will comprise five athletes and a manager, will leave San Francisco November 16. Passage has already been obtained for them. A complete schedule of the trip has been arranged. The towns to be visited include nearly the whole continent of Australia. It will be a fine trip of four months' duration, for the party will not return until the middle of April, when they are due back in San Francisco.

The party will, in all probability, be in charge of William Unruck of San Francisco.

Among the athletes chosen are Jimmy Power of the B. A. A., who will compete in the half, mile and two-mile events while on the tour. He is ably fitted to cope with any athletes in the world at these distances, and will be a fine example of what American athletes are able to accomplish.

He has already covered a mile in close to 4:18, and shows promise of doing much better. At the two-mile distance he be pit of unknown calibre, and will have to train accordingly, but he should run the distance under ten minutes with ease.

The half-mile will come easy to him as he can reel off half miles in close to 1.57, which is as fast as any of the athletes in Australia and New Zealand can run.

In addition to Power, Thompson, an all-round athlete of the Pacific, has been chosen. This is not all that has been done towards selecting the American representatives, however. Invitations have been issued to a half dozen leading athletes to compete, but no definite decision has been reached. The selection of two Eastern representatives has been left to James E. Sullivan, but he has not announced his decision as yet.

Savannah Auto Races Called Off

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 4.—Harry Granger, president of the Savannah Automobile Club, following his return from New York, announced that there would be no Grand Prize or Vanderbilt Cup races in Savannah this Fall. The proposition will be formally called off at a meeting of the club which has been called for Monday, he says, and the trophies will be withdrawn. He declared that the automobile racing game had dropped to a place devoid of sportsmanship.

Granger, representing the Savannah Club at New York, would not accede to the manufacturers regarding entrance and other fees.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

MOMENTOUS doings in baseball marked the third day of October, 1913. On that day, maybe shades of night were falling fast, the Boston Nationals won a double-header from the Brooklyns and thereby cinched fifth place in the National League race. The team that for a decade has been considered a joke ball club by the other teams of the old organization proved that is a joke no longer. It came from last place, which position it held late in May, and passed Cincinnati, St. Louis and Brooklyn.

Nearly every year since the American League established a club in Boston the inhabitants of the South End grounds have finished in last position. Once, maybe twice, they got as high up the ladder as sixth place, but this was considered su accident. Since the American League invaded Boston the National League club has had no less than six sets of owners and the number of different managers is legion.

Finally, in the fall, however, the club found itself on a solid basis and with a capable president and owner, and a shrewd and clever manager the fruits of that combination are found in the showing of the club this season. The Boston public has long wanted the National League club here to get its nose above water. It would seem that the club has done so. The owner and the manager and the players are to be congratulated.

HUB PERDUE has taken the fatal plunge. "He who would feed the pigs while he was sailing at the lofty Alps, or sunning himself viewing the vast pyramids of Egypt" This problem caused him no end of worry and he was on the point of declining McGraw's offer when it suddenly occurred to him that the same person who is now engaged in feeding the pigs could continue to do so. Besides this unpleasantness in connection the others appeared trivial. They can easily dispose of and then Hub wired his acceptance to McGraw.

Next Hub sought out Captain Bill Sweeney, of his team. Besides putting in a busy Summer in the office of his profession, Captain Bill finds time to sell pills and insurance. Hub suggested Captain Bill in earnest converse for a prolonged period after which he purchased a box of pills, guaranteed to cure any known ailment in man or beast, and took out an insurance policy for $20,000, actually putting into Bill's hand the sum of $125 cash as first payment. Then he wrote a letter to his wife, telling her the news, selected a couple of logs from the Boston clubs supply and held himself subject to the orders of McGraw.

IT is rumored that the reason McGraw was so anxious to have Hub take the grand tour was to use him as a pinch hitter.

LITTLE Maranville was also the recipient of an offer to join McGraw's forces and the Rabbit was dead anxious to accept. But Stallings put his oar in and refused to sanction the trip. Of course, Maranville would have gone anyway as he is not subject to his manager's orders during the Winter months, but he decided to respect Stallings' wishes, which was a wise thing for him to do.

THE original plan formed by Comiskey and McGraw was to have each player that agreed to go around the world put up $1,000 as a guarantee of good faith. But the players balked at this and so it was finally decided to make each player deposit $2000. This sum will be returned to the players as soon as the steamship is out of sight of land in order that none of them will have a chance to back out at the last moment.

IT is possible, now that the Pilgrims have clinched fifth place, that Stallings will allow his regulars to "rest up for the world's series" this afternoon and let some of his new recruits show their goods. It is likely that Dugey, the little second baseman secured by purchase from the Dallas club, will play second base this afternoon. Stallings thinks very well of this youngster. A couple of new pitchers are also likely to work.

CAPTAIN BILL drew in four runs and his single figured in a fifth run of the seven gathered by the locals in the second game yesterday. Captain Bill was also right there in fielding his position.

THERE is no doubt but that the interest in the world's series cuts down the attendance at ball games at this season of the year. Everybody is talking of the merits of the clubs and the Athletics and the teams that are still fulfilling their scheduled dates get but scanty recognition. However, there were close to 4,000 spectators at the double-header yesterday, which was not so bad, all things considered.

TODAY is the last day of the championship season as far as Boston is concerned. The Boston National League club has made quite a bit of money on the season, which is gratifying, in view of the fact that the balance has been on the wrong side of the ledger for so many years. While, of course, the Red Sox did not have the great financial season of 1912, it is believed they made a fair profit in spite of the tremendous expense under which the club is operated.

The eleven of the New Bedford High School will be the opponents of Waltham High this afternoon at Waltham and the best game thus far this season is anticipated.

New Bedford came to Waltham with one of the strongest teams developed in the school for several years and was confident of defeating the Watch City eleven.

The game will be marked with much open work. Both teams are very fast and rely on trick formations and forward passes to gain much territory.

Tufts Eleven Meets N. H. State Team

The Tufts football team will meet New Hampshire State this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Tufts Athletic Field, Medford, in the second game of the season. The Tufts men are confident that they will pull out victors, for they will outweigh their opponents ten pounds to the man. All of the men are in the very best of condition, except Tobin, who has a strained knee, and Angell, who still has his finger in a splint. The lineup will be as follows:

Boston College Plays Springfield Y.M.C.A.

The strongest eleven that has represented the Boston College for years will journey to Springfield today to clash with the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College team.

Manager Leo Murray announced the line-up as follows: Ends, Captain Daly and Wall, formerly of Malden High, who was an all inter-scholastic tackle last year; tackles, Dan O'Connor and Ed Killian, the veteran who reported this week; guards, Meehan and McCarthy; centre, McDonald, formerly of Somerville High; quarter backs, Linnehan and "Harry" Riley, and fullback, Sullivan.

Star Yale Punter Is on Sick List

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 4.—Knowles, the punter for the Yale varsity football team, has gone to the infirmary with a heavy cold on his lungs and may not be able to play any more football for a couple of weeks. In his place Weiser will play in the Yale backfield against Maine today.

English Sports Don't Want Jack Johnson

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The London fight fans do not care to see Jack Johnson, negro heavyweight, in action. This fact became known today through an announcement made by fight promoters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 4.—The final game of the American League 1913 baseball season in this city is likely to go down in baseball history as one of the best ever. It is going to be a battle every minute, as Walter Johnson, the highest priced pitcher and Washington speed king, is scheduled to oppose Ray Collins, the big side-wheeler of the Boston Red Sox. These are the present plans of Managers Carrigan and Griffith and they will likely stand.

Collins and Johnson have furnished three of the best pitchers' battles in baseball this season and all have ended with 1 to 0 scores. The decisions went to Collins and one to Johnson, but Walter is bent on evening up matters this time and incidentally hopes to annex his thirty-seventh victory of the season.

The first time these two pitchers met was in Washington on May 30. Collins won in the very first inning when Harry Hooper caught Johnson unawares and banged the first ball he pitched over the wall for a home run. The second game went to Johnson after fifteen fiercely contested innings. In this game Johnson was in a bad hole in the ninth inning, as three Boston men got on bases with none out, but the big fellow was equal to his task and by tying his head at all times managed to get out safely. The third and last time they met, Collins won when Milan let the ball go through his legs, giving Boston the only tally.

Pilgrim-Brooklyn Games Called Off

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Oct. 4.—The final games of the season in the form of a double-header between the Pilgrims and Brooklyn were called off today on account of rain. The managers were anxious to play off the game and held out till after noon before declaring the games off.

Boys Hop Freight to See Big Games

YONKERS, Oct. 4.—Four thirteen-year-old boys from Troy, who were beating their way to New York on freight trains to see the world's series of baseball next week, were arrested as vagrants here. They will disconsolately in cells today waiting for the father of one of the lads to come for them. The boys are Stephen Butler, John Kramer, Edward Dwyer and Joseph Atkins.

Benny Allen Wins Billiard Title

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Benny Allen of Kansas City won the world's pocket billiard championship by defeating Alfredo Oro of Cuba, the title holder for several years, by a total score in the three nights' play of 600 to 516.

Williams Beats Dunn.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 4.—Kid Williams, bantamweight, hung the K. O. punch on Mickey Dunn of New York in the second round of a scheduled fifteen-round bout at the American A. A.

GAMBLERS ARE JOCKEYING ON WORLD'S SERIES

By FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—With the first game of the world's series clash between the Giants and the Athletics only twenty-four hours away, there existed today among the professional betting fraternity a greater degree of uncertainty as to how to lay their wagers than has ever been seen at a meeting of the pennant winners of the rival major leagues.

In Philadelphia of course the radiant Athletic rooter is betting the money he has saved on lunches and carfares on the home team at whatever odds he can get; the New York fans are backing the Giants in similar fashion. But the professional gamblers, the men who wager hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in the outcome of the baseball classic, are "up in the air."

In other years they have been guided largely by the baseball "dope." They weighed the batting, fielding and pitching strength of the contending teams according to their performances during the regular season and then plunged on the team that "doped" out stronger.

Calculations Upset.

But in those other years the "dope" has gone wrong, for the players who were expected to lead their teams in both offensive and defensive playing fazzled and were thorough disappointments.

Dope-ee players, of wooze little was expected, worked terrible havoc with their way club and performed some scintillating stunts in the field. The uncertainties, the peculiar atmosphere of baseball, wedged their way in the betables and upset practically every calculation.

So far no big bets have been registered. The gamblers are jockeying. They want odds one way or the other, but no offers of better than even money have so far been made. The gambling element is laying to drive the odds to 10 to 9, not caring which team is on the big end, but their efforts so far have been fruitless.

As in no case each year, the baseball "doperators" are burning the midnight oil and using up huge quantities of lead pencils in an effort to figure out by the law of averages which team ought to win. The Philadelphia "doperators" figure the Athletics will turn the trick; the Gotham "doperators" are sure the Giants will.

About Equally Divided.

The impartial "doperators" are just about equally divided in their opinion.

Most of the American League players and managers, of course, think the Athletics will win the series, but the majority of the National League athletes favor the Giants.

The minor league magnates and players are divided.

The Athletics have a big edge on the Giants in dope batting strength, the Giants have a pitching staff that the impartial "doperators" declare is 50 per cent. stronger than that of the Athletics. In fielding, the Athletics are a little faster, but in baserunning the Giants are a little faster. And there you are.

Bender Charge of Money Offer Denied

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A wild rumor that has gone the rounds of the city and Philadelphia says that a group of gamblers had offered "Chief" Bender $25,000 to throw his world's series games to the Giants and that the gamblers were betting tons of money on New York to win. Investigation showed there was no foundation for the story. Connie Mack, John McGraw and Jimmy Dygert said the report was too ridiculous to deny.

Mack Denies Rumor.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—When informed of the message from New York to the effect that Bender had been paid $25,000 to throw an alleged gambling syndicate in New York to "lay down" to the New York team, Connie Mack said: "I guess somebody must have been reading those dime novels lately. This is absurd. All Mack would say, except to add that he would not bother to deny the rumor.

Offer $8,000 Bet on Athletics at 4 to 5

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—As keen as the baseball series itself promises to be, is the skirmish of the bettors for odds. A commissioner representing the Athletics' end of the argument appeared here today with $8,000 to place on the Athletics at 4 to 5. John T. Brush, head of the Giants, was made, scoffed at the proposition, but assured the Philadelphia "fan" that a ton of Athletic money could be secured here at even.

Benny Odell, with a wager of $3,000 on the Athletics against $2,500, established odds which the Giants' supporters have tried to split, but no place on all of this bet, which grew out of a baseball argument during the recital given at Saratoga, was taken by a coterie of racing men who have since failed in their endeavor to keep the betting odds at that ratio.

Harvard Regulars in Game Against Bates

Many Substitutions Will Be Made, However—Local Boys in Maine Lineup.

By SYDE LYNES.

WITH its best men in the lineup and confident of making football "pass" sit up and take notice, the Crimson eleven meets Bates in the Stadium this afternoon at 3 o'clock, for the first time in two years. The last time the two teams met, in the opening game of the season, the Crimson eleven had its hands full in defeating the light Maine eleven 15 to 0, but at that time Harvard's eleven had not assumed a makeup anywhere nearly as final as the one the Crimson puts on the gridiron today.

Harvard will have its best team in the lineup, with the possible exception of Milholland at right end, and Mills at left guard. Milholland has only recently returned to action after a week's layoff because of an injury to his knee, and may not be in the best trim, while Mills is still a new man, and although he is giving evidence of making a first-class guard, he still lacks a good deal of the finesse that will be evident in the other members of the line.

PENNOCK ON THE JOB.

PENNOCK, Harvard's all-American lineman, is back on the job, but will probably not play through the entire game, as the coaches are wary of his shoulder, which may still be a little tender, and they are too well aware of his value to the team to take any unnecessary chances with him. Trumbull will be at centre, a new position to him at Harvard, but his experience of one year at guard will stand him in good stead and he is expected to make an excellent showing. With the weakness at centre eliminated, the Crimson will be able to develop its line plunging game, and enable the coaches to determine just what the Crimson backs are good for along these lines.

CRIMSON BACKFIELD AT BEST.

HARVARD has practically limited itself to a very open game thus far, and it will be interesting to see whether against Bates there is a man in the Crimson backfield to take the place of Wendell.

With Hardwick in the running again, the Crimson backfield is as strong as it will be at any time this year. All three of the backs, together with Bradlee the quarter, have received extensive instruction this week in interference, and all being of the speediest variety some spectacular runs should be pulled off against Bates.

GOOD TEST FOR LINE.

IF the light Maine team can bore any holes through the regulars on the Crimson rush line this week, it is pretty certain that some fur will fly when secret work begins Monday. No trouble should be experienced in holding the boys from Lewiston scoreless.

LOCAL BOYS ON BATES.

BATES will stage a team having a number of local boys in the lineup, a fact which should be of interest to spectators. Danahy, the captain, is a former Rindge player, while Kerr was one of the luckies on Malden High last season. Kennedy is a Walpole boy and a member of the subs who may get into the scrimmage are also former local stars.

Bates is said to have a fast backfield and a very clever end in their captain. The Bates ends and secondary defence will have to be on their toes all the time, however, to keep Hardwick and Malmo from playing hide and seek with them, "hide" referring to the football and "seek" meaning the pursuit of the goal.

JOE JEANNETTE IS VICTOR OVER SAM LANGFORD

By ED CURLEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—'Tis a short tale of a nasty left-handed glove that swashed steadily across the ebony jaw of Thaun Langford aided and abetted by a persistent right, that constantly sunk into Thaun's ombonpong, and this combination of circumstances gathered Joseph Jeannette a victory over Thaun Langford last night in the ten-round battle held at Madison Square Garden.

It would not be fair to try and detract an iota from the victory of Jeannette because Langford entered the ring limiting a sonsiful corporation. Joe was in there to try his best to beat Langford, for the result meant first whack at Jack Johnson, of Paris. Jeannette accomplished his mission and that's all you can ask of him.

These two enlisd gen'lmun have fought many a time; so many that they occupy a full page in any record book. We wish to go on record that this was their last meeting.

Sam Isn't There.

Thaun was expected to arouse the vast audience by knocking down Jeannette two or three times and then Joe was to come back strong in the last few rounds and sort of even up matters. Thaun wasn't there. That luxurious trip to Australia didn't help him any, and all we have to say is that it was too bad that Gunboat Smith didn't get first whack at the Bostonian.

Jeannette started after Langford the moment Referee Billy Joh gave the boys the high sign. He slapped with the left, he punched with the left, he jabbed with the left, then he walloped with the left.

Now, when a husky battler does all these things, they certainly help to slow up a gent built on the lines of a pork barrel. Thaun tried to crash over those deadly rights in the opening rounds, but Joe absolutely refused to receive them on his map. He just turned his head sideways and the gloves slid over the bag.

Baldwin Seeks Return Battle With Murphy

South Boston Boy Is Ready to Accommodate Rival. Will Make 134 Pounds.

By JACK CONWAY.

EDDIE MURPHY, manager of Matty Baldwin, stated today that he would like to match the sturdy Hunker Hill "Bearcat" for another bout with Eddie Murphy, the South Boston lightweight, who is not even a thirty-third cousin of the Charlestown man. The Peninsular boxer told the writer the other day that he is willing to give Baldwin a chance to redeem himself and would consent to make 134 pounds for the match.

Therefore it looks as though the only thing necessary to complete the match is for the Ath-Uns Club to reach an agreement with the two boxers and name a date on which they can settle their ring differences.

Baldwin believes he should have been given a draw with Murphy. He contends that he had as big a shade on Murphy when they fought a year ago last June as Eddie had on him Tuesday, and, as Maffit Flaherty, who refereed the first bout, was also the third man in the ring at their second encounter, he asserts that he should have called the second "go" a draw, as he did the first.

Baldwin will be ready to meet Murphy again the latter part of this month. Murphy is planning a strenuous campaign in the West, but it is believed that he will consent to remain in Boston a few weeks longer than he had planned in order to prove that he is Baldwin's master.

ABOUT AMATEUR BOXERS.

WHEN the amateur boxing season opens in New England the officials of the local clubs would be acting wisely if they would investigate amateur boxing in New York and follow some of the rules practiced by a number of the athletic organizations in the big city.

The New York A. C., for example, is going to hold a big amateur boxing tournament on October 16 and October 18. The winners in the final bouts will be presented with a gold watch and fob while silver watches will be awarded for second prizes. The boys who reach the semi-finals will receive medals.

A point trophy will go to the club scoring the most points. The points will be awarded on a basis of five points to a winner, three points to a man who takes part in a final bout but is defeated and two points for a boy who gets as far as the semi-finals.

BOXERS ARE BENEFITTED.

AT New England clubs it is usually the custom to give prizes only to first and second-place winners. They receive gold and silver watches respectively. The winners of first prizes, however, do not receive a fob with their watch.

The boys who are defeated in the semi-final contests do not receive anything for their labors. Time and again the vanquished boxer in a semi-final "go" has been the real star of a tournament.

The New York plan of awarding a club trophy is a good one. It encourages the different amateur organizations to develop boxers, and when a number of powerful clubs are in the field booming the mitt game among the "simon pures" the lads are benefited a great deal.

WALSH IN BOUT TONIGHT.

JIMMY WALSH, the clever Boston featherweight, will meet Eddie Wallace in a ten-round bout in Brooklyn this evening. Walsh should not experience much difficulty in defeating Wallace. Jimmy was outclassed by Johnny Kilbane at the Athletic Club, but, nevertheless, there are few real featherweights who are able to vanquish the local boy.

Ah Chung, the Salem Chinaman, will appear in the semi-final bout against a New York boxer. Eddie Kerrin, who manages Walsh and Ah Chung, states that the Chinaman would make a star performer if he had a little "yellow" in his system.

This may seem a rather strange statement, as Ah Chung's skin is real yellow. Kerrin, however, means that the Chinaman is too courageous. He says that when Ah Chung is hit hard he rushes at his opponent like a wild man, swinging right and left-hand punches instead of covering up and stalling until he recovered somewhat from the effects of his opponent's blows.

Exeter Team Plays Green Freshmen

EXETER, N. H., Oct. 4.—With a team much stronger in every department than the one that faced Cushing Academy last Saturday, Exeter meets the Dartmouth freshmen on Plimpton playing fields this afternoon.

This game will prove a good test for Captain Kelly and George Lowe, who have been changed from centre and fullback respectively to right and left end.

Tom Enwright, the former Worcester Academy star, has not been played in scrimmage as yet, and it is doubtful if he will be in the lineup against Dartmouth Fresh.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 4.—Dartmouth will present a badly crippled team when it lines up against Colby tomorrow.

The last scrimmage, conducted in the rain, worked havoc with the Green stars. Ambrose, the left half back, will be out with an injured leg. Murdock, the full back, is out for the same reason. Pollrith, who was shifted from tackle to end, will not play because of an injured shoulder.

With these men on the hospital list, Coach Cavanaugh will be unable to try out the new lineup that he prepared for this game.

With the absence of Ambrose and Murdock the backbone of the backfield will be gone. Cavanaugh will take no chances in playing any man not in perfect condition, as he is not aiming to pile up big scores, but to develop a team which will equal and excel Princeton, Penn and Carlisle.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1913, by Edward J. Clode.

BUT the cabman with sweat and gasps tumbled to the sheet. And this is what he read:

"The boy, Phillip Morland, whose possession of a collection of meteoric diamonds of great value has created so much sensation, was brought up on remand today at the Clerkenwell Police Court and released. Mr. Abingdon thought fit to keep the case in camera, as this ragged urchin is wandering about London again with a pocketful of gems. He was last seen entering a cab in the neighborhood of the Police Court, and inquiry by our representative at the Hatton Garden offices of Mr. Isaacstein, the diamond merchant, whose name has figured in connection with the case, elicited the information that Morland called there about 3 p. m. Mr. Isaacstein positively refused to make any further statement for publication, but it is probable that the developments in this peculiar and exciting affair will take place at any moment."

In a word, the journalistic world was exceedingly wrath with both Mr. Abingdon and the Jew for baking it of a very resinable bit of news. No effort would be spared to defeat their curious purpose. Phillip must be discovered by hook or by crook, and badgered incessantly until he divulged the secret of the meteor.

At last the cabman became incoherent. "I'm done," he groaned. "My brains are a funnidil. Eire! Some one drink my beer. I'm goin' in for counsel. I 'ad this young spark in my 'ere 'ouse an' didn't know it. 'E offered me, two bob, to did, an' I stood in a drive as a treat, 'e looked such a scatterer."

"Who's next?" cried a raucous voice at the door.

"I am," roared the disappointed one.

"Well, look sharp. There's a hold great a wastin' in bumbreller like mad in 'ere. Don't be 'ou go. I'll be there in 'arf a tick. Who knows? P'raps it's Rothschild."

Meanwhile Phillip did not hesitate as Isaacstein once he reached Isaacstein's office. A new note in his character was revealing itself. Always resolute, fearless and outspoken, now he was confident. He pushed open the swing door with the manner of one who expects his fellows to bow before him. Was he not rich—able to command the services of men? Why should he falter? He forgot his rage, forgot the difficulties and dangers that might yet beset his path. For in very truth he had achieved but little actual progress since he first entered that office five days earlier.

But he had suffered much since then, and suffering had strengthened him. Moreover, he had taken the measure of Isaacstein. There was a score to be wiped off before that worthy and he entered into amicable business relations.

The instant the lumatare Jew behind the grille set eyes on Phillip, he bounded back from the window and gazed at him with frightened look. Had this young desperado broken out of prison and come to murder them all?

"Help! Help!" he shouted. "Murder!"

Clerks came running from the inner office, among them the elderly man who interfered in Phillip's behalf on the last occasion.

ISAACSTEIN AGAIN

"Make that idiot shut up," said Phillip, calmly, "and tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here."

The office boy was silenced and the excitement calmed down. Yes, the diamond merchant was in. If Phillip would walk up-stairs to the waiting room his presence would be announced.

"Thank you," he said; "but kindly see that this urchin does not let others know I am here. I don't want a crowd to be gathered in the street when I come out."

Such cool impudence from a ragamuffin was intolerable, or nearly so. But Isaacstein ruled his minions with a rod of iron, and they would fain wait the little man's pleasure ere they ventured their wrath on the boy. Besides, they were afraid of Phillip. Like most people in London they had read the newspaper reports of the police court proceedings, and they were awed by his strangely incomprehensible surroundings.

So he was silently ushered up-stairs and soon he caught the thick voiced roar of Isaacstein.

The door, however, dived into his private sanctum before Phillip entered the general office. The boy found him there, seated at the table.

The duel began with questions.

"How did you get out so soon? You were remanded for a week."

"Are you going to send for a police man?"

"Don't be rude, boy, but answer me."

"I am not here to satisfy you curiosity, Mr. Isaacstein. I have called simply on a matter of business. It is sufficient for you to know that Mr. Abingdon has set me at liberty and restored my property to me. Do you wish to deal with me or not?"

The diamond merchant tingled with anger. He was not accustomed to being browbeaten even by the representatives of the De Beers Company, yet here was a callow youngster addressing him in this outrageous fashion, betraying, too, an insufferable air of contempt in voice and manner. He glared at Phillip in silent wrath for an instant.

The boy smiled. He took from his pocket the paper of diamonds and began to count them. The action said plainly:

"You know you cannot send me away. If I go to your trade rivals you will lose a magnificent opportunity. You are in my hands. No matter how rude I am to you, you must put up with it."

Nevertheless the Jew made an effort to preserve his tottering dignity.

"Do you think," he said, "that you are behaving properly in treating a man of my position in such a way in his own office?"

In his own office—that was the sting of it.

The head of the firm of Isaacstein & Co., of London, Amsterdam and Kimberley, to be bearded in such a fashion in his own particular shrine! Why, the thing was monstrous!

"Mr. Isaacstein," he said, calmly, "have you forgotten that you caused me to be arrested as a thief and dragged, handcuffed, through the open streets by a policeman? I have spent five days in jail because of you. At the moment when I was praising your honesty you were conveying secret signals to your clerks in the belief that I was something worse than a pickpocket. Was your treatment of me so free from blame at our first meeting as to serve as a model at the second?"

The chair was creaking now continuously; the dealer swung from side to side during the lecture. He strove hard to restrain himself, but the feverish excitement of Saturday returned with greater intensity than ever. He jumped up, and Phillip imagined for a second that robbery with violence was imminent.

THE DEALER RAGES

"Confound it all, boy!" yelled the merchant, "what was I to do when a ragged loafer like you came in and showed me a diamond worth a thousand pounds and told me he had dozens, hundreds, more like it? Did you expect me to risk standing in the dock by your side? Who could have given fairer evidence in your behalf than I did? Who proved that you could not have stolen the stones? Have you to thank for being at liberty now but the expert who swore that no such diamonds had been seen before in this world?"

Phillip waited until the man's passion had exhausted itself. Then he went on coolly:

"That is your point of view, I suppose. Mine is that you could have satisfied yourself concerning all these points without sending me to prison. However, this discussion is beside the present question. Will you buy my diamonds?"

"Yes," he snapped. "How much do you want for them?"

"I notice that their value steadily increases. The first time you saw this diamond"—and he held up the stone originally exhibited to the dealer—"you said it worth six or seven hundred pounds. Today you name a thousand. However, I will take your own valuation for this unimportant collection, and accept fifty thousand pounds."

"Oh, you will, will you? And how will you have it—in note or gold?"

He could not help this display of cheap sarcasm. The situation was losing its annoyance; the humor of it was beginning to dawn on him. When his glance rested more critically on Phillip, the boy's age, the poverty of his circumstances, the whole fantastic incongruity of the affair forced his recognition.

Not unprepared for such a retort, Phillip gathered the stones together, and twisted the ends of the paper. Evidently the parcel was going back into his pocket. He glanced at the clock, too, which ticked solemnly over the office door.

"Here, what are you doing?" cried Isaacstein.

"Going to some one who will deal with me in a reasonable manner. It is not very late yet. I suppose there are plenty of firms like yours in Hatton Garden, or I can go back to Mr. Wilson"——

"Sit down. Sit down," growled the Jew, vainly striving to cloak his nervousness by a show of grim jocosity. "I never saw such a boy in my life. You are touchy as gunpowder. I was only joking."

"Do you think I carry that amount of money in my purse?" demanded Isaacstein, striving desperately to think out some means whereby he could get Phillip into more amiable mood, when, perchance, the true story of the gems might be revealed.

PHILIP'S SCHEME

"No," was the answer. "Even if you gave it to me I should not take it away. I want you to advance, say fifty pounds, today. I require clothes—and other things. Then, tomorrow, you can bring me to a bank and pay a portion of the purchase price to my credit, giving me at the same time a written promise to pay the remainder within a week, or a month—any reasonable period, in fact."

The diamond merchant was quickly becoming serious, methodical, as he listened. This business-like proposal was the one thing needed to restore his bewildered faculties.

"Tell me, boy," he said, "who has been advising you?"

"No one."

"Do you mean to say you came here today to trade with me without consulting any other person?"

"I certainly told Mr. Abingdon I was coming, and I feel that I can always return to him for any advice if I am in difficulty, but the offer I have just made is my own."

Watching Isaacstein's face was an interesting operation to Phillip. Under ordinary conditions he might as well expect to find emotion depicted in a pound of butter as in that oily countenance, with its set expression moulded by years of sharp dealings. But today the man was startled out of all the accustomed grooves of business. He was confronted with a problem so novel that his experience was but wide enough to embrace it.

To Be Continued Monday.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man six years my senior, and I am deeply in love with him, and I know that he thinks quite a good deal of me. As we are third cousins, I would like to know if it would be proper for us to get married. I have been acquainted with him two days. MILDRED.

A THIRD cousin is such a remote relationship that the tie is not a barrier to marriage. But you know him only two days! It is for this reason I say "No." Two years is none too long.

TO MAKE YOU JEALOUS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-four years old and have been engaged to a girl about two years. She is also corresponding with another, and has this gentleman's picture in every room in the house. I would like to know very much for what purpose she is doing this. She is always fair with me when I am with her, and seems to be inclined to be jealous of me when I speak of some other girl friends. D. B.

A COLLECTION of photographs of pretty girls will do more to cure her than accusations and protests.

I am sorry she does this. Love is too precious to be risked losing in this manner.

DON'T PROTEST SO MUCH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-five years old and deeply in love with a young lady a few years my junior. We met a year ago and have been company ever since. I am sure she loves me, but she doubts my love. There is not a thing I wouldn't do for her, and I love her dearly, but as she doubts my love, how can I prove to this young lady that I love her truly?

A. G. B.

PERHAPS you protest so much of your love that you weary her. Try spending several evenings with her without mentioning the subject. This treatment will result in her asking if you love her. In reply be less sure, less emphatic. She will give more heed to a half-hearted avowal than she has given to more full some ones, because she will be interested. I am sure the desired result will follow.

"Now, boys," said a Sunday school teacher, "I want each if you to subscribe something toward the mission to the Caribous. I shall hand the box around, and as each of you contribute you will, I hope, say some appropriate text. Now, Charlie, show a good example."

A ruddy-faced urchin stepped forward, dropped his coin, and observed:

"It is better to give than to receive."

Then another contributed a copper, saying:

"Waste not, want not."

This was ruled somewhat out of order, but it was fairly capped by a third youngster, who evidently parted with his penny with extreme reluctance, for as he dropped it into the box he murmured:

"A fool and his money are soon parted."

The Tangles of Love

Comments on Several Letters Received from the "Love-lorn," and Good Advice.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Love, 'tis the despair of philosophers and sages, the rapture of poets, the confusion of cynics, and the warrior's defeat."

ONE who loves at first sight, writes me: "I am a young lady twenty-one years of age and have money. I am infatuated with a young man of twenty-two whom I have met only twice. He is very bashful. How can I get better acquainted with him without letting him know it?"

Know what, my dear? That you are infatuated, or that you have money? For an impulsive young woman of twenty-one, one will be as difficult as the other, for money has a way of making its presence known, and Love has to know more years than you have known to be easily silenced.

Bashfulness is a good trait, particularly commendable where the girl has money. He at least is not mercenary, or he would babble like a brook to attract your attention. Ask him to call and show him that you are pleased with him. Remembering always, for your own safeguard, that he is a comparative stranger, and that the sentiment which you consider love may be only a passing, childish attraction. Impulsiveness is a fine trait, but may the ranks of guardian angels be doubled around the girl who yields to it!

"I am nineteen," writes Pat Carey, "and deeply in love with a girl named Agnes, who is just eighteen. My friend Tom is also in love with her, and keeps company with her. We have both told her we love her, but he went to a dance, met her there, and dished me out. Do you think it would be mean if I try to win her away from him, as I cannot live without her?"

NOT TRUE

The idea of a man named Pat stooping to ask such a question! He is not a true Irishman, or he would not stop to ask if he should try to win the girl he loves from some other man, even though the other man "dished him out!"

It has always seemed to me that the lover who doubts if he has a right to win his sweetheart doesn't love her very much. Instead of a rival spurring him to action, he drops beside the road and wonders if he has a right to stay in the race!

Really, if the girl has any spirit in her she will accept the man who fights the longest for her, even though she may love the other man the more.

One who hesitates—foolishly writes: "I am seventeen and am employed in a wholesale house where a young man is employed who loves me. He would like to marry me, but gets only $11 a week, and wants me to wait five years. Another young man who gets more wants to keep company with me. I am not fickle, but want to do the right thing."

It is never the "right thing" for a girl of only seventeen, too young to know her own mind and heart, to be bound to a promise to marry a man five years hence. The chances are that he may not be in a position financially to marry at the end of that time, and that both will find their love cooled with the waiting. To accept the attentions of the other man is no proof of fickleness. Fickleness exists only where there is love or its presence. She has never claimed either. She is only seventeen, and has youth's divine right to accept the attentions of any honorable young man. And may Love, with its wonderful gift, come to her some day, carrying with his offering no grinding condition of a five years' wait.

"I am seventeen," writes a little girl who is beginning to taste the bitterness of love early, "and deeply in love with a young man of nineteen. He said he loved me, but I see him going out with other girls. It makes me feel like to see him go out with other girls."

Of course it does. It always has. It always will. The great tragedies of fact and fiction are evolved from that very condition. It makes your little heart ache, and no doubt you have made your nose red and your pretty eyes dim by shedding tears over his perfidy.

PAYING THE PRICE

You are paying the price of Love, little girl, all too soon. One should not begin to be seventeen to shed the tears that are caused by a man's fickleness. One should at that age be merry and glad, and laugh at Love instead of weeping over him.

Don't say, "It makes me blue." Don't take a woman's pains before you reach woman's estate. Laugh and be glad that you care so little for the man who goes with other girls, and you will find yourself caring less.

No matter what the perils and the price, Love is worth all one endures, all one pays. Let us have faith in it, hope in it, welcome it. Let us regard it with the simple faith of childhood that led us to fall with a sigh, and close the book without a doubt, firmly believing the gospel truth of the closing line:

"And they married and lived happy ever afterward."

The Well Dressed Girl

BY FANNIE WARD

No. 2—Two More Wonderful Gowns and Hats.

An Offering in Lace.

By Fannie Ward

(Star of "Madam President." Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ARE you an individual or an example of a certain type? In all probability you have always prided yourself on being different from other people. And yet! And yet you clothe yourself so that to the casual observer you look exactly like every other woman who passes by for casual observation.

The world is in a hurry.

People are likely to glance at you and to form a snap judgment based on what the eye beholds in that momentary glimpse.

Your appearance breaks the ice of acquaintanceship for you.

If you want to be an unnoted member of a uniformed chorus, accept calmly the clothes that are offered to you as "So smart! Why, every one is wearing them!"

But if you want to give your personality a chance for a fair hearing, dress so that the eye of the beholder will observe that you are an individual. Then the mind will give you a fair chance and you will be one of the principals," not a mere member of the chorus!

Today I am showing you two frocks and two hats of my own designing. My idea of a smartly dressed woman is not a dressmaker's mannequin.

THE DIFFERENCE

It is rather the woman who shows in every individual line of her garments that she has studied Dame Fashion's demands and has made a few demands of her own.

Reject, accept, modify and combine. But if you are a disciple of the art of making living, breathing human beings attractive pictures, pray do not wear a costume that you will see duplicated in various grades and prices from Tallahassee to Seattle.

Behold, then, two of my gowns. They are doubly "mine," because they are of my designing as well as of my wearing.

Is not the black one a pet? And if the little home dressmaker does not want to be so extravagant as to purchase black Ghantilly lace, fine net or point d'esprit will make her a very dainty frock. The upper bodice is kimono to the elbow. There fitted cuffs of the lace are added. A cross piece of the lace comes between girdle and kimono. This slopes high at the middle of the front and back and narrows away at the underarm seam.

The girdle is of draped black satin or charmeuse. Vary its width (as I suggested in my previous article) according to your height and slenderness.

The skirt has a little round train and drapes up in front, leaving a slit for freedom to walk. A lampshade tunic of the lace drapes over the skirt and cascades in fulness at the hips and back. If not too strongly accentuated, these tunics are very kind to full figures, for they cover the line of the slightly bulging hip. But for the woman who has passed the point of plumpness and is unquestionably "fat," they must be strictly taboo.

ADDING TO HEIGHT

The upstaring bat of lace and the high mass of aigrettes at the back add height. But make quite sure whether your face becomes topheavy and overlong by the line of trimming at the back. Trimming at the front or side may be arranged equally well to give height.

The walking stick, the high-massed roses at the

The little lace frock has a fitted velvet girdle lengthening over one hip. This somewhat modifies the abrupt note of the black girdle on white. Try various sloping lines in the lower edge of your girdle. Your eye will tell you which is most flattering to the lines of your figure.

This dress illustrates a number of points I think you will do well to consider. The skirt narrowed at the hem and with a peg top fulness at the hip is fashion's edict. See how I have modified and softened this by the shaped girdle and soft pleated frill.

The neck is the universally becoming V in the surplice line. Over the surplice under blouse is a little "blouson" of the black net. The inner frill forms a Medici frill at the neck—and a very becoming background this black frill makes. See how white and clear your own skin will look—IF ONLY YOU FIND THE RIGHT BACKGROUND!

THE SLEEVE

The long, slightly full sleeve, narrowing into a fitted cuff that extends half-way to the elbow, makes the arm appear long and slender, and gives the hand a very graceful appearance.

The black velvet hat has a soft swathing of maline. At either side of the back are clusters of roses from which upstanding aigrettes arise. Of course, aigrettes are not permitted here. Loops of ribbon, quills, "fantasies" of ostrich or even soft loops of maline will take their place. If the narrow line of trimming massed at the back is not good for your face, try this separated trimming.

The idea of my whole chat today is—find what suits you in the catalogue of fashion; don't just suit yourself to the fashion. Express your own personality in every way. And let the world feel you are going to do this because of the individual expression of the clothes you wear.

Their Married Life

Warren Insists Upon Breakfast at Home, Although There Is Nothing in the House

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

BEWILDERED by the sudden awaken-ing, Helen sat up to bed. Another insistent peal of the bell, and she reached for her slippers.

Warren turned, grunted, and then, as the bell shrilled on, he raised himself on his elbow with a sleepy, irritable,

"What the devil's that?"

"The kitchen bell, dear. I think it's Mrs. O'Grady—we're overstaying ourselves, and Helen, now in her slippers and dressing gown, hurried out to the hallway.

"Oh, Mrs. O'Grady, I'm so glad you've come," as she opened the door to her Irish washerwoman. "I was afraid you'd be prevented for today."

"Yes, miss, this was Mrs. Collins' day, but I put her off till tomorrow. I know you'd need me right bad, just getting back. Did you have a nice trip, miss? You look real well," for Helen's pink gown and disheveled hair was not unbecoming.

"Oh, do you HAVE to go to Mrs. Collins' tomorrow? disappointedly. I wanted you the rest of the week—I mean not get a girl before Monday."

"Why, ain't Maggie coming back?"

"No. She's got another place. You dear, in just a minute," in answer to an impatient call from Warren. "Get your things off, Mrs. O'Grady, and begin in the front room," and Helen ran back to the bedroom.

"Now here," demanded Warren, who was just getting up. "Why can't we send her out for some things and have breakfast here? I am not keen on going to any restaurant this morning."

"But, dear, there isn't a thing in the house—no milk or anything! We haven't even got the silver out!"

"Got kitchen knives and forks haven't you? Now, you send her for whatever you need. We'll have breakfast here."

Helen hurried back to the kitchen and pencilled a list of bread, butter, milk and eggs.

GETTING BREAKFAST

"I guess that's all," giving it to Mrs. O'Grady. "We've got coffee just go to that little grocery around the corner that a pound of butter will do—I don't think they have very good things. And, oh, you'd better get a cantaloupe—Mr. Curtis will want some kind of fruit."

If Warren had only told her yester-day that he wanted breakfast here, thought Helen resentfully, as she dressed quickly and began to set the table. But he had said they would go out, and now nothing was ready.

"He didn't have no cantaloupe, so I got two oranges," as Mrs. O'Grady put down the package on the kitchen table.

"All right," hurriedly. "Now put the butter on one of these small plates and cut the bread for toast, while I make the coffee. Eigh! there's a roach!" as Helen took down the coffee canister. "There's another! And I told Maggie particularly to put soda around all these shelves and in the sink before she closed up."

"Guess Maggie didn't hurt herself after you left," snuffed Mrs. O'Grady. "Guess she knew that she wasn't coming back."

"Why, where's the coffee?" as Helen now opened and stared into the empty canister. "Why, I know we've got coffee."

A hurried search through the boxes and paper bags in the pantry disclosed more roaches, but no coffee.

"You'll just have to go our again—quickly as you can. Get a pound of Mocha and Java. Have them grind it."

"Where's the paper?" demanded Warren, appearing at the door.

"Oh, I forgot to order it yesterday. I'm sorry, dear, but I'll be sure to tell the boy today."

Warren turned back into the dining room with an impatient, "Almost ready? It's getting late."

"There wasn't a bit of coffee, and I had to send for some more," apologetically, "but she won't be a moment."

If Warren had had a paper he would have been impatient, but now, after a few moments strolling up and down the dining room, he called:

"It's ten minutes of nine. I can't wait around all morning."

"It won't be a moment now," hurrying in with the cut oranges. "Come, sit down, dear, and have your orange—that couldn't get any cantaloupe."

"Pretty thin orange," as Warren gouged into the juiceless, pulpy fruit with a kitchen teaspoon.

"Yes, there's not much," and Helen ran to the door hopefully.

The maid diverted Warren, until she brought in the coffee and the three-minute eggs.

WARREN'S WANTS

"Want another teaspoon here," he frowned, as he broke an egg with a kitchen fork.

"Wait, dear; I'll have to wash the one you had for your orange. We've plenty of kitchen tablespoons—but only two tea spoons."

Helen started into coffee and ate her egg with tablespoons, but Warren was never expected to put up with any more make-shifts than necessary.

"Now, try to get things to shape so we can have dinner tonight—in lack of restaurants. You'll get some sort of a girl today?

"I hope so," hopefully. "That Sarah woman promised to send me one this morning—but you can't depend on any of them.

"Will you come here a minute, miss," called Mrs. O'Grady.

Helen found her upon the kitchen chair, before a shelf of utensils.

"I thought I'd wipe off these shelves while you were havin' your breakfast—and see what I found."

From behind a wooden chopping bowl and a stone crock she drew out a newspaper in which was wrapped one of Helen's best dessert plates. There was a large exhaled piece broken out of the scalloped edge.

Helen took it with a little cry of dismay.

"You were always sayin' Maggie never broke nothin', with studyin' so much notion for Mrs. O'Grady and Maggie has never been good friends. Instead of tellin' you when she broke things she did away with 'em. She must have forgot about this an' guess if you count up your china you'll find a lot of 'em gone."

With dancing cheeks Helen took the plate in to Warren.

"Warren, look; just look at this! It's one of the set cousin Ellen gave us when we were married. Maggie broke it and hid it away. Do you suppose she's broken other things? I never dreamed she was that kind of a girl."

Warren shrugged his shoulders. "I thought she'd been washing, but you seemed to think she was such a jewel."

"Why, Warren, you're the one who thought she was so wonderful just because she was a good cook! I always said she was useless, but I did think she was honest. I'd never have left her to close up the apartment if I hadn't. Now I don't know what to think," glancing ruefully at the plate. "Do you suppose it can be mended?" fitting in the piece.

"See here, I've got enough to worry about; for heaven's sake don't bother me about a lot of fool trifles. Finish the whole office upset yesterday; they'd let everything go while I was away. I'm going to fire that stenographer soon as I get time to break in another. Now you ought to be able to run things here without everlastingly bothering me."

"Oh, I know you're lots to worry you," with quick self-reproach. "Don't think about anything here. I'll get along all right. Mrs. O'Grady's so fast we'll have the whole place clean before night," with forced cheerfulness.

HIS TRUNK

"Get that trunk out of my room. Stumble over it every time I go in."

"Yes, dear, I'm going to send the trunks down to the basement the first thing. Then nothing you'll find everything straight."

"Well, I hope so. It's been blamed uncomfortable since we got back."

Helen always took to heart the slightest suggestion that she was not doing her part. She knew that the getting home to a tidy apartment and no maid had been attended with some discomforts.

And now, as soon as Warren was off, she started in with intense energy, determined to get all arrears and rights before he came home that evening—and to get dinner even if the girl did not come.

Now, I'll wash the dishes, so you can begin right away in the front room," she instructed Mrs. O'Grady. "Give it a thorough cleaning, for the other one's the dust cloth, and you'll want a whisk broom to brush off the couch and chairs."

Helen loathed to wash dishes; it was the one part of the housework from which she shrank. But now she piled them in the sink, intent only on getting them out of the way, so she could get to the bedroom.

She was buoyed with the real housewife spirit of "cleaning up." The very fact that there was so much to do, that it would require so much more work and management to get it all done before night, gave her a certain sense of pleasure. It was an incentive to her best efforts.

"The dumpsan! It's in the bottom of that cupboard, and now here's honey, Mrs. O'Grady," with eager enthusiasm. "We want to have the whole apartment cleaned before Mr. Curtis comes home. If I don't get a girl, could you stay to-night and help me get dinner?"

Sure, miss; I can stay as late as you want me. My old man's working in the country now and he don't come home to dinner."

"Oh, that's fine. Soon as I get through here I'll order the groceries. We've eaten in restaurants so long Mr. Curtis will love a real home dinner."

And as Helen washed the dishes she mentally worked out the menu. How she had heard so much in Paris. After all, it was good to get back home—and to work.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

Passing the Recipe.

DAISEY MAYME APPLETON makes a cake called Golden Cake, which calls for twelve eggs. She makes it once a week, no matter what the price of eggs, and has become such an adept that her friends pay her the compliment of asking for the recipe.

"It really cost us only five eggs," she wrote to a friend making the request, "for we deny father his egg for breakfast, which means seven toward the cake. Self-denial, as I tell him, is good for every one, and especially good for the men. No, he doesn't eat any of the cake.

"Beat the eggs separately—and I have the cutest little eggbeater. I got it on sale, and mentioning sales reminds me that I got three new dresses last week for $10 each, and as they were very cheap, and it is every girl's duty to buy when things are cheap, a duty she owes to her dear father, who toils so hard for the money she spends.

"When the yolks are stiff—and that is such hard work I tell mother she is like Elsie the knowledge that she is helping me in my cake baking, and I believe it is my duty to give her all the pleasure I can. Have the oven very hot, not too hot, you know, but just hot enough. Mother watches the oven. She doesn't mind the heat at all.

"Bake in layers, and if you could see the darling little sifter I have you would make that your next gift. I always sift the flour myself, having read once of a girl who answered the doorbell with flour in her hair, and the millionaire who stood there married her next day, knowing she could cook. I forget where they went on her wedding trip, but he just settled thousands and thousands of dollars on her, and hugged her with his strong arms, and kissed her with his firm, though somewhat stern mouth, and tangled up her veil with the fondest ones. I forget the name of the book, but I will try to remember and tell you.

With much love,

DAISEY MAYME."

Then Daysey Mayme sealed and directed the letter, and having once passed through the Indian Reservation on a train, devoted the rest of the day to writing a letter to Mr. Sitting Bull on "The Indian: His Past, Present and Future, and What the Red Man stands for as a Factor in Civilization."

THIN FOR YEARS---"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. B. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 182 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 30 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and get thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 53 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folk say: "I'd give most anything to put on a little extra, anything to put on a little extra, way they exclaim: "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and cannot know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted, and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. Just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat and aids nature in separating all of its flesh producing ingredients. It prepares these fat making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you? Isn't it worth trying?

Hair Grew 4 Inches in a Few Weeks

A St. Louis Lady Increased the Length of Her Hair Four or Five Inches in Only Few Weeks with This Simple Home Recipe.

A well-known St. Louis lady, after using a simple recipe at home, by which her hair was mixed at home, made the following statement: "Without exaggeration, my hair has grown four or five inches." The recipe she used is as follows, and any lady or gentleman can mix it at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ½ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the tips of the fingers. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out.

It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. These ingredients can be obtained from any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home. Adv.

"CASCARETS" FOR COSTIVE BOWELS

Headache, sour stomach, biliousness and bad taste gone by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and inactive bowels. They cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to sickness—biliousness, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseous. A Cascaret tonight will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

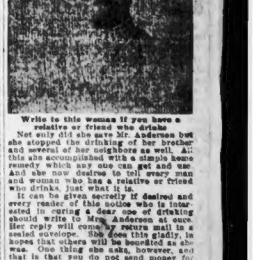
STOPPED HIS DRINKING

This Wife and Mother Saved Her Husband Over Ten Years Ago

SHE WILL GLADLY TELL YOU HOW FREE

Write to Her To-Day. Send No Money. She Has Nothing to Sell

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over ten years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.



Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mrs. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this was accomplished with a simple home remedy which any one can get and use, and she now desires to tell every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, just what it is.

It can be given secretly if desired and every one of the hundreds who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She believes so firmly in the hopes that others will be benefited as she was, in curing the drink habit, that she is that you owe her one cent to send her she has nothing to sell. Her complete address is 45 Hill Ave., Hillburn, N. Y.

NOTE. This offer should be accepted at once as there are many of those who drink, in fact, every one who has succumbed in any way to intemperance, should write Mrs. Anderson at once. Do not delay, write Mrs. Anderson immediately. Also NOTICE OUT and mail it to a friend who could use it, or, maybe, you, yourself. Adv.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were off today, both Boston and New York during the first hour, and the range was higher than the close of the morning, when a recession occurred, transactions were of considerable volume. Among the issues to close higher were Tulon Pacific ¼, Canadian Pacific 1¾, and Erie ¾. Those to end with losses included Steel ¾, Reading ⅝, Lehigh Valley 1, and Amalgamated ⅝.

New York Opened Quiet.

The New York market opened firm and quiet, with Canadian Pacific moving nearly two points advance. Within half an hour it shaded. Among issues to show early gains were Union Pacific and Steel. Among those to register losses were Erie Union, International Paper, California Petroleum and Corn Products.

The Curb was irregular.

There was not much business in American loans in London. Canadian Pacific was strong there because of its recent earnings.

McAdoo on Commercial Paper.

In assessing currency bill critics, who have said the volume of short term commercial paper held by the national banks was so small as to render the rediscount provisions of the measure of little value, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has made a statement. He announced that on August 9 last, the date national banks held $3,428,055,157 of paper maturing in ninety days or less.

The aggregate of loans and discounts is $6,022,406,597, of which $2,594,351,440 matures in more than ninety days. In short, he says, 56 per cent of the paper held by national banks showed a maturity of ninety days or less. Of this class of paper central reserve city banks held $758,000,000, as compared with $616,000,000 of more than ninety days. Other reserve cities held $923,000,000, as compared with $629,000,000 of more than ninety days. Outside of reserve cities there are 6,756 country banks. These held $1,235,000,000 of ninety days or less and $1,237,000,000 of more than ninety days.

These figures, based upon reports to the Comptroller of the Currency, the Secretary said, seemed to disprove the claims of the opponents of the bill.

Status of Currency Bill.

Now that the tariff bill has been passed and the administration can give all its effort to the currency bill, a final attempt to get the latter enacted at this session of Congress is to be made. President Wilson is going to have it passed if he has power to get it through the Senate. Today an attempt will be made to thoroughly determine the situation. An effort will be made by Senators Owen, Fletcher, Bradley and Hollis, members of the Banking Committee, who are supporting the currency bill, to learn what can be done in order to an agreement with other Democrats and to vote bearings which may last for weeks longer. Delay is the chief weapon of the opponents of the measure.

Senators Reed, O'Gorman and Hitchcock and the Republican members of the committee have made it apparent that they favor continuing the hearings until all available information has been laid before the committee.

Tariff and Cost of Living.

Democratic leaders in Congress who are credited with the honor of getting the new tariff enacted so quickly all say that it was framed to cut the cost of living and that it will do so. Politicians say that upon the workings of the measure in that respect the Democratic party will be judged by the people.

"The bill," said Speaker Champ Clark, "was intended to reduce the cost of living. If it did not achieve that it would not be of any value and would have no excuse either for the passage or for its existence.

"I feel assured," said Leader Oscar Underwood, "that its operation will justify all that we have said it would produce and the way of effects upon business conditions. Assuredly it will reduce the cost of living."

"You may say," said Senator Simmons, "that it is a tariff bill that will, above all things, reduce the cost of living."

Financial News in Brief.

Western steel mills are getting more new business than those in the East. Orders for the trade as a whole are said to be running at the rate of from 25 to 30 per cent of plant capacity. Everybody connected with the trade is awaiting the effect of the new tariff.

A new $1,000,000 commune organized in New Orleans is said to aim at the monopolization of the American molasses trade.

F. L. Milliken & Co. have published a leaflet giving high and low prices for September and October dividends.

MORE BOYS QUIT SCHOOL; MAYOR TO SIFT CHARGES

Three more boys have run away from the West Roxbury Parental School within the past twenty-four hours, making ten in all within a fortnight, following charges of brutal treatment against three heads of the institution.

Joseph Leondar, father of Herman Leondar, has applied at police headquarters for the arrest on an assault charge of Thomas H. Boyle, a former teacher at the Parental school, whom he accuses of punishing the boy with a strap until his hand was black and blue.

The charges being investigated are against Mrs. Pfeiffer for forcing steaming hot potatoes into the mouths of two of the boys and breaking an umbrella across the back of another. Mcgillivary is charged with having stood one of the boys on a hot stove until his soles were burned off his shoes and his feet became blistered. The charges against Boyle were dropped by the trustees when it was learned that he had resigned.

The trustees have notified those who have lodged the complaints against the attendants that a hearing on the charges will be held in the near future. This action will not be taken until Superintendent Minard has completed his report, which will probably be in the hands of the trustees next week.

Upon Mayor Fitzgerald's return from the West on Monday he will start a rigid investigation of the troubles at the school. Chairman O'Hare of the children's institutions department is investigating conditions at the school, and proposes to have a complete report for the Mayor.

Chairman O'Hare said: "We do not propose to stand for brutal treatment, and we propose to investigate every charge that has been made."

Militants Burn Chancellor's Home

Arrest Two Women Charged With $25,000 Arson.

HAMPTON-ON-THAMES, Eng., Oct. 4.—Militant suffragettes today burned the home of Dr. Tristram, former chancellor of the diocese of London, doing damage estimated at $25,000. Two women loitering in the vicinity were arrested on a charge of arson. A great quantity of suffrage literature was found on the fire.

Statistics compiled today place the damage to property by suffragettes since their campaign of violence began three years ago at $2,700,000.

Pastor Hall Quits Charlestown Pulpit

The Rev. Oakel F. Hall, four years pastor of the Winthrop Congregational Church, Charlestown, has resigned the pastorate to take effect November 1, and the Athletics, showing many of his famous baseball snapshots. A series of bird's-eye views, taken from a mortar battery 250 feet in the air, was a feature of the lecture.

Mr. Hall is going to Indiana to be pastor of an undenominational church at about one-half the salary that he received in Charlestown.

FEDERAL FIGHT TO RUSH N. H. REFORM WORK

The United States government, it developed today in Washington dispatches, is behind the demand that the New England transportation problem be satisfactorily settled as soon as possible. The civil anti-trust suit to be brought by Attorney-General McReynolds, for the dissolution of the New Haven Railroad, will, it is declared, be aimed to correct alleged monopolistic conditions and suppression of competition.

It is pointed out that the question of possible criminal prosecution for violation of the Sherman law, will be determined by a study of the testimony in the Department of Justice's investigation, and probably by the developments of the civil trial.

Officials of the New Haven Road have said, it is indicated, any purpose to negotiate with the government for a settlement of the issues. While the Attorney-General is proceeding with the prospect of a lawsuit it is stated by those close to the situation that he would not refuse to negotiate for a settlement of the question out of court if the road should be willing to grant the government's demands.

President Elliott of the New Haven has been in conference with the Washington authorities recently and it is intimated further conferences will be held.

The trustees of the New Haven directors in providing for the appointment of six special committees to investigate every phase of the railroad's affairs touched upon in the Interstate Commerce Commission's report, including the financial and operating managements of the New Haven system were severely criticised, is being investigated today. The committees include:

1—A committee to take up, investigate and report on the relations of the road to the Boston & Maine Railroad.

2—A committee to take up, investigate and report on the relations of the New Haven with the Boston & Albany Railroad.

3—A committee to take up, investigate and report on the western Massachusetts trolley situation.

4—A committee to take up, investigate and report on the relations of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine Roads.

President Elliott has made public the reply formulated by the directors to the commission's report. It sets forth the steps already taken by the New Haven to comply with the commission's recommendations.

Perhaps Peter the Great DID Have Brown Eyes

He Was Not a Really Great Man Anyhow. No GREAT MAN Has Had Anything But Blue or Gray Eyes. We Are Sorry for J. M. P.

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

The great men of the world are and have been men with blue or gray eyes.

The only exception is the man with so-called hazel eyes, so light that they are included in the category of "light-eyed men."

Brown eyes and black eyes often belong to meritorious individuals. They are the eyes very often of honest men, capable, energetic men.

But of the world's GREATEST MEN concerning whom we have definite knowledge EVERY ONE WITHOUT EXCEPTION HAD LIGHT EYES.

Respectable gentlemen with brown or black eyes dislike the light-eyed theory, but they must in some way accommodate themselves to it. The simplest way is to hope that the next time they come to this earth they will have evolved into light-eyed men.

Observe these FACTS. The greatest of all musicians was Beethoven—gray eyes.

And the next among musicians was Wagner—gray eyes.

The three greatest fighters were Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon—all with light eyes. And the men when they thrashed, pursued and conquered were brown-eyed as a rule.

Vercingetorix, the Gaul, who made the best fight against Caesar, was blue-eyed.

Our own Grant was blue-eyed, and so was Lincoln, bigger than Grant.

Greatest of all writers, Shakespeare, had light eyes, and the next man to him in modern days, Goethe, was a blue-eyed man.

Dante, greatest of the writing Italians, had gray eyes.

And that was true of Michael Angelo, the greatest artist.

The biggest living American inventor, Edison, has blue eyes that would suit any young baby.

Blue-eyed also were Washington, Jefferson and Franklin.

One young man, Mr. J. M. P., is very earnest and rugged, and with a few thousand years of evolution on this planet he will be a great man—this young person dislikes the blue-eyed theory—he possessing very nice liquid, honest brown eyes. So he writes in substance as follows:

"I have busted your blue-eye, brown-eye theory. Studying the life of Peter the Great of Russia, I find that his eyes were very dark. You can't deny that HE was a great man, and so your blue-eye theory falls to the ground."

On the contrary, the theory stands up admirably. Perhaps Peter the Great DID have black eyes, although we doubt it in view of his race.

But Peter the Great was not by any means a great man. He was only PETER the Great. He was remarkable for his day, for his courage, for his will power.

But if he had been the right kind of a great man he wouldn't have killed dozens of seamen, on the theory that he could gradually teach them to drink salt water safely. He would not have been so needlessly and inconceivably brutal. Cruelty is ignorance.

Some day we shall know why it is that the man with the light hair and the light eyes is ahead of the dark-haired, black-eyed man. That it IS so we feel instinctively. Even our young friend J. M. P. will admit this. He could not imagine a Viking of the old days sailing the sea and conquering the south except as a big, broad-shouldered man with fair skin, yellow hair and blue eyes.

He could not imagine black or brown eyes in the place of Napoleon's gray eyes, piercing through men big and little, finding a great marshal in the son of a small lawyer, discovering the ridiculous weakness of the kings that he kept waiting in his ante-chamber.

We know that this is irritating to our brown-eyed brothers. But let them remember that a man can be very successful, very useful and a great deal of an American, even if he has brown eyes.

It is true that Harriman, Rockefeller, Morgan, Carnegie and the modern DOLLAR conquerors are blue-eyed also.

But that need not cause despair. Brown-eyed friends, DESERVE success, and you'll find joy in deserving as great as the joy of possession.

Increase Our Merchant Marine

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The AMERICAN is to be commended for editorially advocating, in a recent issue, an increase in our merchant marine, a subject receiving far too little attention at present. While perhaps believing that, to successfully compete with our foreign rivals, we must eventually adopt the policy of every great maritime nation by granting subsidies to our merchant vessels in the foreign trade, nevertheless, the provision originally contained in the pending tariff bill, to which your editorial referred, providing for a 5 per cent. discount of duty on goods imported in vessels of American registry, would have produced a very considerable increase in our shipping and would not have excited the opposition of those who are opposed, on principle, to the granting of any subsidies. That the Department of State finds a violation of treaty obligations in the provision is to be deeply regretted.

But the substitute provision offered by the AMERICAN, providing for a five per cent. discount of duty on "vessels built in the United States," falls far short of giving the desired encouragement to our foreign shipping. Assuming that the five per cent. discount would afford sufficient incentive to the foreign shipowner to build ships in United States yards at a cost of at least twenty per cent. more than in English yards, it cannot be supposed that he would deliberately place the ships under American registry and thereby subject them to the much more exacting and costly requirements of operation, including wages, comfortable accommodations, rations, number of crew, etc., as required by United States law. It follows that if the ships were not placed under United States registry they need not, and hence surely would not, be officered and manned by United States citizens. Indeed, even though under United States registry, the number of American citizens on a ship is now required to carry is but a portion of the entire crew. It is therefore clear that the modification of the five per cent. discount clause which the AMERICAN offers would be ineffective in upbuilding the much desired merchant marine, either in ships or men, and would operate only to the benefit of our shipbuilding industry, already thriving because of its immunity from foreign competition in the construction of ships for domestic trade.

It may well be added that the whole matter of our shipping law is illogical and unsatisfactory. There should be a comprehensive revision based on the fundamentals of American construction, bona fide American ownership and all-American crews, with a frank recognition of and provision for the fact that it costs more to build and to operate such all-American vessels. Not until then will the American flag again be seen in the ports of the world. Very truly yours,

WALTER R. MEINS.

Marry the man you love, girls, the man who interests you, the man of whom you never tire, the man with whom you have every thought and sympathy in common, though he be as poor as a church mouse.
—DOROTHY DIX.

BY DOROTHY DIX

LOOK at this picture, girls. It shows a maiden trying to solve the problem that confronts many of you—the problem of whether it is better to be an old man's darling or a young man's slave.

All the worldly wise old women, with hard faces and keen eyes, say to the girls:

"Take the old man. What does it matter if he is fat and bald-headed, and has a figure built after the similitude of a bay window, and if the touch of his hand makes your flesh creep, and the heavy tramp of his feet coming toward you makes you want to take to the tall timbers? What if his conversation makes you yawn yourself to death?

"He can give you automobiles, and a fine house, and imported clothes, and trips to Europe, and everything to make life easy and soft. Love? Pooh! Nice to read about in books and to see in plays on the stage, but it won't pay bills, my dear, nor keep you from being shabby and poor. Romance? You leave that at the altar, anyway, so why pay an extravagant price for it? Believe me, my child, that all husbands are alike, and then a woman's happiness in life depends on what sort of an establishment she has got."

Has Only to Say "Yes" and Luxury Will Be Lavished

So say the worldly wise old women, and the girl listens to their words because she craves the good things they enumerate. She would like to roll about in her limousine. She would like to have her opera box, and wonderful gowns, and ropes of pearls, and diamond tiaras. She would like to travel and see her picture in smart society journals, and she knows that she has just to say one little word and all these things will be hers.

Her head assents to what the wise women say, but not her heart. That cries out for some slim youth with the curl of bowhood still in his crisp hair, with his eyes full of dreams and his pockets empty, whose lightest touch thrills her from head to foot, and the sound of whose step coming toward her is the music of the spheres to her ears.

But this is a practical age, when even Cupid has to take account of the high cost of living, and so the girl is torn between the temptation of love and plenty. Which shall it be—the old man who can give her a shopping ticket, or the young man who can give her little but romance? Which shall it be, bread and cheese and kisses, or truffles and champagne and bare tolerance?

Take the young man, girls, the poor young man and love, rather than the old man without love, although every hair on your elderly suitor's head be strung with diamonds. Marriage, at best, is no picnic. It is a strenuous undertaking, full of trials and tribulations and troubles, and the only thing on earth that can gild its fetters and make it endurable is love.

You never know how cranky a human being can be, and how many of the fifty-seven different varieties of frailties and weaknesses he or she can possess until you are married to the said imperfect party, and nothing but seeing this individual enveloped in a halo of tenderness keeps you out of the divorce court. Marriage without love and without romance is a hell on earth, and the whole Standard Oil crowd combined haven't got enough money to pay anybody for going through a lifetime of it.

The girl who marries for a home or for the luxuries some man can give her has no right to draw her skirts away from any woman of the street. She has sold herself just as truly as any of that sorrowful sisterhood, and with less excuse.

Moreover, no woman earns her living in a harder way than she who marries for it and who must make all of the inevitable sacrifices of matrimony, not through love which sweetens them, but because it is her duty as a wife.

Also remember this, girls, that the old proverb's theory that being an old man's darling is a sinecure was evidently first propounded by a doddering old widower trying to marry a debutante. It is a misleading guide to go by. The rich old man is willing to dress his pretty young wife up like a fine doll and show her off before his friends, but beyond her millinery no one need envy the old man's darling her luck.

Old people are almost invariably tyrannical, and set in their ways, and narrow, and selfish, and opinionated, and to these unamiable qualities the old husband invariably and justifiably adds jealousy. The young wife of an old man earns all she gets by putting up with the crabbedness of age, by having all of her actions spied upon, and by having to nurse the rheumatism and the gout when she would like to be enjoying the pleasures that belong to her age.

Look at the young wives of old men that you know, the girls who have married for money. Is there one happy looking one among them all? Did you ever see wearier, more bored looking faces? They do not look alert and alive as working women look. They have not the smiling, contented faces that the wives of so many poor men have.

You see these women have found out what a terrible thing it is to have nothing but money, and how little money really buys. It doesn't take you long to get all you can eat and wear, and then the purchasing power of money stops. It won't buy you love, nor a single solitary thrill, nor brighten by one degree the dreary, soggy, endless evenings that you spend tete-a-tete with a husband whose society bores you to extinction.

Marry the man you love, girls, the man who interests you, the man of whom you never tire, the man with whom you have every thought and sympathy in common, though he be as poor as a church mouse. Youth calls to youth, you must match enthusiasm with enthusiasm, hope with hope. You must enjoy the same things, like to do the same things, to have any comradeship, and comradeship between husband and wife makes the only enduring tie. It is the only thing that brings happiness.

Better Love in Small Flat Than Riches and Empty Life

Better is a dinner of herbs that two happy young hearts can laugh over than a dinner at the finest restaurant with an old gourmet whose jaded palate nothing can tickle. Better a Dorchester flat with love than a Beacon street palace and an empty heart and an empty life.

Besides, girls, it's lot more fun to help a young husband make a fortune than it is to spend an old husband's money. Marry the young man, and may heaven bless you, but heaven never blesses the union of May and December.

TWO VOICES

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

VIRTUE

O, wanton one, oh, wicked one, how was it that you came,
Down from the paths of purity to walk the streets of shame?
And wherefore was that precious wealth, God gave to you in trust,
Flung broadcast for the feet of men to trample in the dust?

VICE

Oh, prudent one, oh, spotless one, now listen well to me.
The ways that led to where I tread these paths of sin were three;
And God, and good folks, all combined to make them fair to see.

VIRTUE.

Oh, wicked one, blasphemous one, now how could that thing be?

VICE

The first was Nature's lovely road, whereon my life was hurled.
I felt the stirring in my blood, which permeates the world.
I thrilled like willows in the Spring, when sap begins to flow,
It was young passion in my veins, but how was I to know?

The second was the silent road, where modest mothers dwell
And hide from eager, curious minds, the truth they ought to tell.
That misnamed road, called "innocence," should bear the sign "To Hell."
With song and dance in ignorance I walked that road and fell.

VIRTUE

Oh, fallen one, unhappy one, but why not rise and go
Back to the ways you left behind, and leave your sins below,
Nor linger in this vale of sin, since now you see, and know?

VICE

The third road was the fair highway, trod by the good and great.
I cried aloud to that vast crowd, and told my hapless fate.
They hurried all through door and wall and shut Convention's gate.
I beat it with my bleeding hands; they must have heard me knock.
They must have heard wild sob and word, yet no one turned the lock.

Oh, it is very desolate, on Virtue's path to stand,
And see the good folks flocking by, withholding lock, and hand.

And so with hungry heart and soul, and weary brain and feet,
I left that highway whence you came, and sought the sinful street

Oh, prudent one, oh, spotless one, when good folks speak of me,
Go, tell them of the roads I came; the roadways fair, and three.

Their "Barbary Coasts" the Shame of the Cities

By the REV. CHARLES F. AKED, D. D.

This article was written for the San Francisco Examiner, but what Dr. Aked writes of conditions there is generally true of most large cities. The Examiners' crusade quickly led to an order by the city authorities of San Francisco for a vigorous clean-up.

THE appeal of the San Francisco Examiner for a greater and grander San Francisco has fallen on responsive hearts.

This city is ready for a sane, brave, determined effort to do the right and get right done. There are multitudes of men and women who are sick and tired of seeing the name of San Francisco associated with municipal corruption, brutal sports and a cynical exploitation of vice. San Francisco is not a vicious city. It is not inhabited by a horde of vicious persons. It is a city with a soul. It is fit to be the guiding brain and inspiring heart of our empire in the Golden West. And there is a great and growing passion of resentment against the "procurers, thieves and baser parasites of society" and their friends and backers and champions in office who stain and shame the city's name.

There is one great issue before San Francisco in this hour. It is this: Shall the Exposition year be a time of debauch, of "wide-open" licentiousness, a year of orgy? Or shall it be a joy and pride and glory to us all, leaving behind it influences, artistic, educational, creative, as well as vast material prosperity, which shall add to the health and wealth of our western world?

An Impurity Party

We have an Impurity Party in our midst. It is made up of "hyenas who make carrion for their obscene appetites and vile feasts of the bodies and souls of unhappy girls." In simple phrasing: There are some men and a few women who are willing to make their profit out of prostitution and every vile and filthy practice associated with it. Now, these few could be dealt with, would long since have been dealt with, were it not for the strange and sad delusion which for more than a generation has possessed the minds of many San Francisco men that they and the city generally in some way or other share in the profits that debauchery brings. They do not see themselves as they are. They do not realize the implication of the position they assume. They do not see—and they ought to be made to see—into what an entirely damned state of soul any human being has fallen when he is willing to make his money by the profits of prostitution.

The vilest words in the language are reserved for the men and women who make their profit out of vice. Shakespeare spent his strength in holding up such creatures to the detestation of mankind.

Do anything but this thou doest. Empty Old receptacles, or common shores, of filth;
Serve by indenture to the common hangman,
Any of these ways are yet better than this;
For what thou professest a baboon, could he speak,
Would own a name too dear!

And the men who think that it "pays" to run "a wide-open town" and are willing to favor the running of it—it is time they called themselves by the name which a baboon would scorn.

Vice Does Not Pay

As a matter of fact, vice does not pay. Extravagance, riot, licentiousness do not pay a city. San Francisco has had bad advertising. Its Barbary Coast has been advertised all over the world. A seaman tells me that in every port he enters when men know he has come from San Francisco they ask him about the Barbary Coast. A member of a concert party of international reputation tells me that on the first night after the concert here they were taken to the Barbary Coast—and they go across the continent to talk about what they have seen. What sort of advertising is this?

And it is as idiotically wasteful, ruinous and suicidal to make the Barbary Coast the outstanding feature in a city's attractions, as it is vile and shameful. That which is morally rotten cannot be economically right. And only a fool thinks otherwise.

The Red Light Injunction and Abatement Law is held up by the referendum. It will be October or November of next year before the people vote upon it. It will be carried by an enormous majority in the State. If by any such chance the Impurity Party should succeed in rolling up a large vote against it in San Francisco, that will do the city immense harm. But after the law has been affirmed by the popular vote, some time will elapse before it is fully at work. There will be convictions, but there will be appeals and all the defilement of the law's delays. That is all that the Impurity Party want. They want to delay the operations of it through 1915. They want their wide-open town while the Exposition lasts.

The Law Is Enough

But without the Red Light Injunction Law, the law of the State, the penal code of California is enough. Sections 315 and 316 stand. Ours is a government of laws, not a government of persons. The Mayor and the District Attorney have no more legal or moral right to allow the house of prostitution to exist than they have to allow false coiners or cutthroats to carry on their business openly. We should not need a new law if officials would honestly enforce the old ones.

We want a greater and grander San Francisco. We do not want a city that makes you think of a Scotch Sabbath. We do not want kill-joys, sour-faces and sorehead. We have no place in this city for the man who kills the music and bone for him who quenches the light. We love pleasure and we are not ashamed of it. We are ready to add sunlight to daylight by making the happy happier than before. But we do not want dirt, degradation, drunkenness, debauchery, disease. And we will not tolerate them.

THE SMALL TOWN

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

A MAN whose nerves were ragged from the strenuous city life
Decided he would take a rest and wouldn't take his wife.
"I'll go to some small town," he said, "and live upon a diet,
Where folks are kind and simple, and where everything is quiet."

The weary man packed up his grip, and after some delay
He found a little village where he thought he'd like to stay.
He started to enjoy the rest he had so truly earned;
He strolled among the villagers, and this is what he learned:

That Hiram Jenkins was a beat who never paid a cent;
That Abner Hawkins drank so much he couldn't pay his rent;
That old Squire Higgins was a crook and had been all his life;
That Perkins ran a card game, and that Jimson beat his wife.

He learned that Mrs. Hopkins washed her dishes twice a week,
And did some giddy things of which they didn't like to speak.
He learned that Mrs. Wiggins smoked a cigarette one day
And flirted with the druggist when her husband was away.

After he heard these items, as they passed from lip to lip,
The weary pilgrim had enough, and packed his little grip.
He went back to the city on the first and fastest train,
And never took the rest cure in a little town again.
